Washington—(AP)—The Bolivian minister advised Secretary Kellogg Wednesday that his country would continue to participate in the Pan-American conference on arbitration and conciliation now in session here.

Minister de Medina called at the department upon receipt of word from his government that it had reconsidered the attitude expressed in Tuesday's note to Secretary Kellogg in which it declared that it could not participate in the conference until Paraguay apologized for the attack upon a Bolivian fort.

Washington—Although the United States would be happy no matter which instrumentality were used to prevent war—either the league of nations or the Pan-American conference meeting here—the fact that Paraguay makes a definite appeal for intervention to the Geneva league has caused a rubbing of eyes.

Three Latin American countries, Cuba, Chile and Venezuela are represented on the Geneva Council and it is assumed here they will influence the league to defer action beyond appeals for peace, international conference of American states on conciliation and arbitration has had a chance to function.

It is not for the accident that the conference is being held in Washington, the United States alone would have to assume a leadership in the movement to mediate the dispute. This was fraught with considerable anxiety to us as the United States government did not feel any too comfortable when it tried to solve the Chile-Peru dispute over Tacna-Arica. A certain amount of anti-American feeling manifests itself whenever the United States essays the role of mediator.

The viewpoint here is that the question is largely local and should be left to the Pan-American states to adjust.

U. S. IN TOUGH ROLE
It is recognized that the friction between Bolivia and Paraguay has already reached a point of passion and that Bolivia is insisting that Paraguay be pronounced the aggressor nation. For the United States to make such a pronouncement would mean a lasting antagonism on the part of Paraguayans toward the United States and might conceivably affect trade relations. Some outside tribunal like the league of nations could render an opinion as to blame with less chance of reprisal. Indeed, there was an active group inside the American official circle insisting that the Tacna-Arica dispute should have gone to the world court or the Hague tribunal for adjudication for the same reason, namely, to avoid anti-American feeling.

The difficulty is that the league does not want to offend the United States by taking cognizance of disputes in the western hemisphere. Nearly every appeal from a Latin American country for aid from the league has met with a polite refusal or postponement.

STEER CLEAR OF U. S.
The answer is obvious from the Washington viewpoint—if the league attempts to settle a dispute between two members of the Pan American family in South America it might be asked to pass upon a dispute between the United States and Mexico or some other Latin country, a circumstance that would prove embarrassing because of the sphere of interest which the United States feels it has in this hemisphere, particularly north of Panama.

The general belief here is that the Pan-American conference will be the mediator in the controversy between Bolivia and Paraguay and not the league of nations.

Mate Wins Decree

Panama—(AP)—An interlocutory decree of divorce has been granted Lyle Womack from Ruth Elder, (above) who was rescued by a tanker when she attempted to fly across the Atlantic.

The divorce action was instituted in the Canal Zone district court by Womack on Sept. 6, before sailing for the Antarctic with the expedition headed by Commander Richard E. Byrd. In a deposition placed before the court, Womack's father said that unhappiness caused by Miss Elder was the main cause of his son's joining the south polar expedition.

Suspect In Murder Case Is Released

Delavan Man Released in
"Culvert Case" at Request of Prosecutor

Elkhorn—(AP)—Although the defense counsel favored a trial, Donald LaFave, 26, of Delavan, held on a warrant since Nov. 24, charging first degree murder of an unidentified girl whose body was found stuffed in a culvert near here Aug. 24, was exonerated and released from the county jail here early Tuesday night, for lack of sufficient evidence.

Attorney Arthur J. Moran, Delavan, counsel for LaFave, said Tuesday night that the defense had preferred a trial for LaFave to show that the state had no case.

EVIDENCE LACKING
Such action which led to LaFave's freedom was taken before Justice George Belton, on recommendation of District Attorney Charles Williams, who said the prosecution had not sufficient evidence to warrant a trial.

LaFave, before the action Tuesday night was scheduled for a preliminary examination before Justice Belton Wednesday morning.

The arrest of LaFave took place, after an investigation by Walworth county authorities into the screams and cries reported to have been heard from a Lake Delavan cottage owned by LaFave, Sr., prior to the time when the body of the girl was found in the culvert on the Williams Bay road. Blood stains were found on bedding and walls in the building. The cottage is owned by LaFave, Sr., a Delavan contractor.

LaFave maintained that on many occasions parties had been held in the cottage and the building had been broken into many times. He asserted that some of Delavan's most prominent citizens could easily explain their presence in the cottage if they would talk.

State Board Sees no Evidence of Repetition of Virulent Epidemic

Madison—(AP)—A state survey of the influenza situation, completed by telegraph by the state board of health Wednesday shows that "there is no evidence that we are going to have a repetition of the severe type of a decade ago, but that there is an unusual amount of sickness classified as a mild type of influenza cannot, however, be questioned."

This was the statement of Dr. C. A. Harper, state health officer, in making public the results of the survey.

TONS OF MAIL AWAIT PLANES ON 1ST FLIGHT

Valley Cities Active to Give Airmail Rousing Start on Saturday

Determined to give the new airmail route through the Fox river valley a most auspicious start, cities on this line are working hard to have an enormous amount of mail at the airports ready for the ships to pick up when they stop. Oshkosh businessmen, it is said, have pledged themselves to have a ton of first class mail for the ships and other cities will have enormous amounts.

Up until a day or two ago Appleton was somewhat laggard in preparing for the start of airmail but Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday postal officials and chamber of commerce officers went to work with the result that more than a dozen institutions, including the largest in the city, have agreed to send all their first class mail by air next Saturday. In addition thousands upon thousands of envelopes for airmail use have been distributed about the city with the suggestion that they be used for the first flight over the air line.

"It has been suggested that Christmas cards be sent by airmail, not only to increase the volume on this first day of the airmail service but to relieve the heavy mail congestion on trains and other carriers. Mail sent by air is in transit a very short time and as a result it will have a tendency to relieve congestion.

Letters mailed here in the afternoon will be carried to Chicago in time to catch the east bound plane leaving at 8 o'clock and arriving in New York and intermediate cities for morning delivery. Mail sent out of there in the afternoon will reach the airport at Boston, Mass., at 7:50 the next morning.

By the same token mail sent from New York in the afternoon will be delivered the following morning in Appleton.

The airmail serves not only the east but the west and south. Appleton.

Bandits Open Fire on Collection Car of New York Bank—Guard Wounded

Yonkers, N. Y.—(AP)—In a daylight holdup in the heart of this city's business section seven or eight robbers opened fire Wednesday morning on the collection car of the First National bank and escaped with a $100,000 payroll after wounding one of the bank guards.

The collection wagon, a partly armored automobile, was transporting the payroll from the postoffice to the bank for later delivery to the Alexander Smith and Sons Carpet company, one of the largest organizations of its kind in the world. Two bank guards and a city policeman were riding in the car.

At the intersection of Buena Vista and Hudson-st. in the center of the city a group of men in another car opened fire on the bank car, shooting directly through the windshield. Adolph Kauser, one of the guards, was shot through the arm. The other guards and policeman were subdued by the robbers, who escaped with the payroll toward New York city, switching on the way from their original automobile with a Jersey license, which they deserted, to another car.

The amount of the payroll was announced by Police Chief Quirk, who made immediate report to state police and New York city police, asking assistance in apprehending the robbers.

MINNEAPOLIS WOMAN IN COURT FOR MURDER

Hayward—(AP)—A jury to try Valerie Cox, Minneapolis music hall entertainer, on a charge of murder, was expected to be completed Wednesday afternoon.

As court recessed at noon, 20 prospective jurors had been examined and with the exercise of challenges, the eligible jurors were reduced to 20.

A. M. Gunn, Minneapolis attorney, conducted the questioning of jurors, asking many if the fact that liquor was available at a party attended by Miss Cox would influence them.

Appleton's Poor And Helpless Again Look To Good Fellows Club

Once again it is the privilege of the Appleton Post-Crescent to espouse the cause of the poor and friendless in the annual appeal to the Good Fellows. There are dozens of unfortunate families in Appleton dependent entirely upon others to keep their bodies and souls together and it is for these that the Good Fellows are asked to contribute during this Christmas season.

The Good Fellows club as an institution is acquiring the respectability of age. Organized almost ten years ago to provide some measure of Christmas happiness for Appleton's poor it has grown with each year until it is an important factor in Appleton's community life.

Without officers, expenses or laws, the club exists solely for the purpose of helping the helpless. It is open to everyone, the only test of eligibility being a kindness of heart which prompts giving to the unfortunate. The membership roll is published daily in the Post-Crescent during this Christmas season so that all may know who the Good Fellows are.

The membership fee is the amount of money you wish to give to the poor. Every dollar that the members pay is given to Appleton Welfare council which divides it all among the four cooperating relief organizations which make up the council. These societies are the Jewish Ladies Aid society, the German Ladies Aid society, the City Relief Society and the Ladies auxiliary of the Catholic Order of Foresters. The money is distributed to them in proportion to the number of families they care for, and duplication of effort is eliminated entirely by a clearing house maintained by the Welfare council. Names of all families receiving help are submitted to this central agency so that duplications can be stricken out and waste prevented.

There is no administration expense connected with the work of the cooperating charities or of the Welfare council, and members of the Good Fellows club can be assured that every cent they give will be used to help the poor.

On another page of this paper will be found a coupon which you are urged to fill out at once and mail to the Good Fellows club, care of the Post-Crescent. Remember there is a great need for your help and be as generous as you can with Appleton's poor.

Uncover Plot To Bomb Hoover Special Train

Buenos Aires—(AP)—A plot to bomb Herbert Hoover's special train has been frustrated. With two men under arrest, police Wednesday were continuing their search for any anti-American agitators who might be involved.

Fifteen hundred guards will be employed on special duty to insure the safety of the United States president-elect when he arrives Thursday and during his visit.

President Irigoyen in a statement on the plot, said police in searching a house in Estomaba-st found four hand grenades, two cylindrical bombs, one square bomb, dynamite, revolvers, automatic pistols, quantities of ammunition and 150 10-peso notes.

The police announced that a room in the railroad house contained a detailed map of the railway system. Police believe the plotters intended to place the bomb on the tracks on the outskirts of the city just before the arrival of the Hoover special train.

Police in raiding the house arrested a youth who said he was Carlos Gutierrez, 18. The authorities said, however, that the real name of the youth was Alejandro Romano and that he was 21 but posed as younger in hope of obtaining leniency under

Doctors Say Abbot Thompson Now Has Slight Chance to Recover

Although Abbot Thompson, 27, Green Bay, Wednesday noon had not yet regained consciousness since he was injured in the automobile accident on Highway 41 about 7:30 Tuesday morning attending physicians stated his condition was slightly improved and that he had a slight chance for recovery. Tuesday the doctors said Thompson had little chance to live. His skull was fractured and his jaw was broken when he was hurled from the truck, in which he was riding with 11 other workmen, and landed on his head on the pavement.

All of the men were employees of the Northern Corrugating company of Green Bay and they were on their way to Appleton when the car skidded on the slippery pavement at a curve near Potomac Point and crashed into a telephone pole, and then tipped on its side.

Ralph Denny, 24, Bay Settlement, was instantly killed in the crash and four other men are in St. Elizabeth hospital with injuries. They are: Edward Du Fresno, 28, Allen Hansford, 18, Clarence Conard, 22, and Clarence Van Caster, 24, Green Bay. President Pays Special Tribute to Wright Brothers and to Lindbergh

Washington—(AP)—The progress of man's efforts to conquer the air, going back to the fourth century before Christ was outlined by President Coolidge Wednesday in an address before the International Civil Aeronautics conference.

Mr. Coolidge drew a picture of flying, especially of heavier-than-air flying in the present day which showed the great strides of this new industry since the Wright brothers rose from the sand dunes at Kitty Hawk, N. C. 25 years ago in the first sustained flight in a machine-driven airplane.

He pointed out that in 1925 the value of the aeronautic industry in the United States was $5,000,000 and that it now is $150,000,000. Regular flying in this country, beginning with a short air mail line, he said, has increased to 15,500 miles and plans were under way to extend international lines to the Isthmus and South America.

"All nations are looking forward to the day of extensive, regular and reasonably safe intercontinental and interoceanic transportation by airplane and airship," he said. "What the future holds out even the imagination may be inadequate to grasp. We may be sure, however, that the perfection and extension of air transport throughout the world will be of the utmost significance to civilization. While the primary aim of this industry is and will be commercial and economic and the prosperity of the world will be immeasurably advanced by it, indirectly, but no less surely, will the nations be drawn more closely together in bonds of amity and understanding."

Mr. Coolidge devoted a large portion of his address to a review of the history of aeronautics in which he praised the achievement of the Wright brothers.

Fond du Lac—(AP)—After 20 years of confinement in state penal institutions for the insane, Grant Poole, 53, Fond du Lac farmer, may escape further expiation for the shooting to death of Mrs. Jennie Davis in 1908.

Released from the state insane asylum last May after having recovered his mental powers, only to be jailed on the murder warrant, Poole may go free, District Attorney L. E. Gooding told the Associated Press.

The district attorney said he doubted whether a conviction could be obtained and that the state was considering accepting an entry that Poole was insane at the time he shot the woman in death in the Methodist church in the village of Oakfield, May 21, 1908.

Some disposition will be made of the case this week, Mr. Gooding said, probably at the conclusion of the James Dwyer murder case, when the Poole case was scheduled to be called for trial. Poole has been held in the county jail since his release from the insane asylum.

West Before Senate For Probe On Insull Dealings

Washington—(AP)—Roy O. West, secretary of the interior, sat silently on the witness stand Wednesday while testimony he had given two years ago was read to the senators who are considering whether his confirmation to the cabinet post shall be recommended.

The secretary, who received his appointment while connivance was in recess, was asked no questions. His former testimony, given to the campaign funds committee headed by Senator Reed, Democrat, Missouri, told of his investments in the Samuel Insull utility interests and of campaign activities in Chicago and Illinois. The reading clerk read for two hours, reading testimony by the cabinet officer that he had solicited a $10,000 contribution from Insull which was to be used for "local purposes only" in the 1926 campaign.

West said that he, his wife and his mother had invested in the Insull interests and that he had consulted Insull about these investments. The 1926 testimony was placed in the record at the request of Senator Walsh, Democrat, Montana. After his reading the committee recessed until 10:30 a. m. room rang with laughter.

While the primary aim of this industry is and will be commercial and economic and the prosperity of the world will be immeasurably advanced by it, indirectly, but no less surely, will the nations be drawn more closely together in bonds of amity and understanding."

PRaises Wright Brothers

Mr. Coolidge devoted a large portion of his address to a review of the history of aeronautics in which he praised the achievement of the Wright brothers.

"Others, whose names will long be remembered, had done much to solve the problem," he said, "but it remained for the able, persistent and modest brothers from Dayton to demonstrate completely the possibility of a machine raising itself by its own power."

MURDERER IN 1908 MAY ESCAPE SECOND TRIAL

Fond du Lac—(AP)—After 20 years of confinement in state penitentiaries for the insane, Grant Poole, 58, Fond du Lac-co farmer, may escape further expiation for the shooting to death of Mrs. Jennie Orvis in 1908.

Released from the state insane asylum last May as having recovered his mental powers, only to be jailed on the murder warrant, Poole may go free, District Attorney L. E. Gooding told the Associated Press.

The district attorney said he doubted whether a conviction could be obtained and that the state was considering accepting an entry that Poole was insane at the time he shot the woman to death in the Methodist church in the village of Oakfield, May 31, 1908.

Some disposition will be made of the case this week, Mr. Gooding said, probably at the conclusion of the James Devoy murder case, when the Poole case was scheduled to be called for trial. Poole has been held in the county jail since his release from the insane asylum.

West Before Senate For Probe On Insull Dealings

Washington—(AP)—Roy O. West, secretary of the interior, sat silently on the witness stand Wednesday while testimony he had given two years ago was read to the senators who are considering whether his confirmation to the cabinet post shall be recommended.

The secretary, who received his appointment while congress was in recess, was asked no questions. His former testimony, given to the campaign funds committee headed by Senator Reed, Democrat, Missouri, told of his investments in the Samuel Insull utility interests and of campaign activities in Chicago and Illinois.

The reading clerk read for two hours, reading testimony by the cabinet officer that he had solicited a $10,000 contribution from Insull which was to be used for "local purposes only" in the 1926 campaign.

West said that he, his wife and his mother had invested in the Insull interests and that he had consulted Insull about these investments. The 1926 testimony was placed in the record at the request of Senator Walsh, Democrat, Montana. After its reading the committee recessed until later in the day when Mr. West's examination was to be continued.

9 Cops Shot By Crazy Negro Boy

Fifteen Bullets Lodge in Youth's Body During Siege of His Home

Chicago—(AP)—A 16-year-old crazed Negro boy Wednesday shot and wounded nine policemen, before more than 200 policemen and firemen, using shotguns, pistols, tear bombs, streams of water and machine guns, succeeded in breaking into his barricaded home and killing him. Deputy Police Commissioner Martin E. Mulen was among the wounded.

The youth, Ernest Whitesturt, gave the police department one of most protracted fights in its history.

Police fired on the building in which he made his stand from adjacent buildings, telephone poles and from ladders. When Captured Whitesturt had received 15 bullet wounds, but he lived for two hours despite his injuries.

Whitesturt threw a brick through a store window late Tuesday night. Police pursued him into his home in N. Townsend-st, northwest of the Loop. The Negro rushed into the building and arming himself with a shotgun turned it on his pursuers, wounding Policeman Edward Fontaine.

"BATTLE" DEVELOPS

The police retired and summoned reinforcements. Then for five hours, using steel shields, machine guns, riot guns, tear bombs and streams of water they tried unsuccessfully to dislodge the body who fired with pistols and the shotgun alternately from a bathroom and bedroom window. Police finally broke into the building at dawn and cornered him in the bathroom where volley of shots was poured into his body as he snatched one of his weapons in a policeman's face.

The wounded policeman suffered mostly from minor bullet wounds although the condition of two was considered serious. Deputy Commissioner Mulen, directing the attack, received a charge of buckshot in his ear and neck.

Three sisters, one a year-old baby, and two brothers of the Negro were in the house with him throughout the siege. By huddling in a small room they were able to escape most of the effects of the tear bombs through the shattered windows.

When the siege was over and they came out of hiding all were nearly white from the wall plaster chipped by the police bullets.

When the siege was over the three-story brick building resembled a war relic. Hardly a square inch of plaster remained on the ceilings or walls. Every window in the structure was smashed and the brick walls bore the pockmarks of bullets. During the battle powerful searchlights played on the building.

10 DAYS TILL CHRISTMAS

KING SUBMITS OPERATION AT BASE OF LUNG

Prince of Wales Visits Father at Buckingham Palace Shortly After Noon

London—(AP)—It was stated officially Wednesday that Prince George who has been serving aboard the H. M. S. Durban, left Bermuda Wednesday morning for New York. He will leave New York on the Berengaria which sails for England Friday.

PEOPLE ARE DOUBTFUL

Find Hope in Fact That Queen Mary Leaves Palace to Attend Function

Some of the purulent fluid was removed and further drainage will be necessary.

Announcement of the operation was made in a bulletin timed 3:20 in the afternoon, and signed by five of the six physicians who have been attending his majesty. This bulletin read as follows:

"The slight improvement in the king's condition noted this morning is maintained. Some purulent fluid around the base of the right lung has been removed by puncture this morning and further drainage will be necessary."

The prince of Wales, who reached London late Tuesday night after his 6,000 mile voyage from Africa, visited Buckingham palace shortly after noon Wednesday and spent an hour and a half there. This was after the puncture operation. At about 1:30 he returned to his home at York house.

During the afternoon Queen Mary attended the unveiling of the Mercantile Marine War Memorial at Tower hill. She was accompanied by Princess Mary.

KEEP UP HOPE

Although King George's condition continued grave, hope was not abandoned. He immediately recognized the prince of Wales, who was permitted to visit his father late at night after completing a dash of about 6,000 miles from the interior of equatorial Africa which he left two weeks ago this morning.

Hope was also encouraged by the fact that the queen had not cancelled an engagement to act for the king late Wednesday afternoon in unveiling a war memorial.

While some quarters assumed that the prince would not have rushed to Buckingham palace if the end of the king had not been near, it was insisted at the palace that such a meeting would not have been allowed had physicians attending the king regarded the excitement which would attend it as likely to have an effect immediately dangerous.

FAYS SHORT VISIT

When the prince first arrived at the palace it was announced that he was not allowed to see his father. Later it was stated, however, that he did see the king but the visit was not prolonged for fear of tiring the patient. These contradictory statements were explained unofficially Wednesday by the announcement that the king was sleeping when his son and heir arrived, but he woke before the prince left the palace and as his condition showed some improvement it was decided that the visit might be permitted without risk.

In view of the prolonged strain to which the king's constitution has been subjected it was generally felt Wednesday that serious developments might occur at any hour. The evening bulletin on his condition stated that there was no increase in his exhaustion and that his pulse was steady. Medical writers in the newspapers pointed out, however, that no gain in strength was noted and that the king's general infection continued.

Shortly before midnight it was unofficially stated that there had been a slight change for the better in the king's condition. This announcement was regarded as giving some encouragement.

It was stated semi-officially that the king was making a magnificent struggle against his illness although deep anxiety persisted at the palace. The fact that his majesty passed a quiet day enabled his constitution to continue the fight against the general infection.

YOUNG BOYS QUARREL OVER GAME—ONE SHOT

Kenosha—(AP)—An argument that arose in the course of a card game between three boys here Tuesday resulted in the wounding of Leo Badelka, 5, by Anthony Zanotti, 11, who fired a .38 calibre revolver at the boy.

Anthony, Leo and the latter's brother, Charles, took to a game of cards while Mrs. Zanotti went to Milwaukee on business. Anthony was angered at the way the game progressed.

Bretting Resignation Enables Kohler to Appoint Entire New Commission

Ashland —(P)—Ralph Bretting, chairman of the Wisconsin State Highway commission has wired his resignation to Governor Zimmerman, to take effect immediately. It was learned here Wednesday. Mr. Bretting was appointed by the governor on Jan. 28 of this year.

Mr. Bretting, owner of an iron works here, was chairman of the Ashland board and prominent in civic activities here before he went with the highway commission.

Bretting was Milwaukee Wednesday last members of his family and friends on the county highway board confirmed reports he had resigned. His wife said he was to become district manager for the Holt Tractor company of Peoria, Ill., at Green Bay, taking office Jan. 1, 1929.

ALL MEMBERS OUT SOON

Madison —(P)—Resignation of Ralph Bretting from chairmanship of the state highway commission means that the entire commission will probably be renewed shortly after Governor-Elect Walter J. Kohler assumes office.

The commission consists of three men, Mr. Bretting, Dwight S. Welch of Baraboo, and P. Walter Petersen, Racine, and the ex-officio members, El F. Bean, state geologist, and P. E. Turnure, dean of the University of Wisconsin College of Engineering.

Dean Turnure and Professor Bean will keep their places, but Petersen's appointment by Governor Zimmerman was not confirmed by the state senate and the incoming governor need not send the same name to the incoming legislature for confirmation.

Welch's term expires in February, 1929, so that by that time all of the appointive members can have been replaced.

TAKE JOB AT 'BAY'

Governor Zimmerman announced that he had received the telegram of resignation shortly after advice from Ashland were received here.

He said he received a letter from the resigned commissioner stating that he would take up work with the tractor company at their Green Bay office soon.

Governor Zimmerman said he was "thoroughly surprised" at the resignation, and that he had no idea whatever on whom he would appoint the Bretting's place. The appointment will be made soon, however, it was learned.

Toys To Keep Children Abreast Of Modern Pace

Civilization may be dashing along at a pace that makes natives of the early nineties stand gasping as it whirrs past, but the children of today will keep pace if the manufacturers of toys have anything to say about it. Being too young to read and converse about aeroplanes isn't going to keep the modern child from knowing how they are built, why they run, and how they operate, and by the time he is reading about the World War in grade school he will have gained a first-hand knowledge of caterpillar tractors, machine guns and other war devices from his Christmas toys years before.

Time was when granddads' gifts the twenty-eight-grandchildren and three great-grandchildren were confined to drums, bugles, dolls, play-house dishes and bears, with only a few variations in color to make Johnny think his "present" any different from Jimmy's. The variety of toys could be piled on one counter and Christmas shopping was a snap—with the list running something like this: three doll buggies for Katy's children; five trains for Henry's boys; and rattles for the babies.

Today the list is endless, and each year the toys become more elaborate, more durable, and more educational. Toy aeroplanes have taken the place of trains; player pianos have been substituted for the tinkling, seven-keyed piano; tin baking set, with their cookie cutters and sharp-edged spoons, have been replaced by elaborate aluminum sets made for actual use.

FAVOR MINATURE MACHINERY

The greatest innovation, however, has come in the leaning toward miniature machinery, durably constructed and operated by its own power. Perhaps the most popular mechanism in this year's assortment is the miniature caterpillar tank, a which climbs insidiously over anything in its path, just as the giant tanks did during the war. Other toy machines this year are cement mixers, dredges, wreckers, excavating machines, derricks, traveling cranes, baggage trucks, sand screeners fire trucks, ice wagons with chunks of glass for ice buses and army trucks. Displayed in one store is an tire street with buses, street cars, traffic signals, policemen, fruit vendors and other usual traffic moving in an orderly fashion down two boulevards.

Speed boats, race cars and sail boats are as popular as usual, but father's interest in golf evidently has not been inherited by the child, as golf games are not in great demand — or perhaps it's because money is taking measures to have golf purged silent when the master of the house is not at home. For girls junior victrolas, small size electric irons with colored handles, player pianos and junior cleaning sets are in demand, although the doll still holds first place as the sensible gift for small girls.

According to one retailer of toys, children clamor for anything that makes noise or can be set in motion — which explains why aeroplanes, victrolas and hydraulic machines have replaced the old standards, such as blackboards, toy violins and colored paints.

POST-ELECTION RECORD SET BY HOOVER MARKET

More Than Half Billion Dollars Change Hands Daily in Riotous Sales

BY CLAUDE A. JAGGER

New York —(P)—The post-election stock market, which now can be viewed retrospectively over a period of more than two weeks, has presented such a spectacle of volcanic boiling and surging as never witnessed before in the history of stock speculation.

Day after day more than half a billion dollars have changed hands in riotous trading. Not since 1900 has the result of a national election brought any proportionately comparable orgy of stock dealing, and the "bull" market following the election of McKinley, while then regarded as a marvel of speculative mania, was a tame affair compared with the present.

Total sales on the New York Stock Exchange in that year totaled approximately 140,000,000 shares, in contrast to nearly 100,000,000 in shares in October, 1928, alone. Post-election markets generally have been based upon financial and industrial conditions and in the long run the result of elections has called forth little more than a "bullish" celebration. The 1900 bull market followed the termination of the Spanish-American war and the definite establishment of the United States as a world power. The elections of 1904 and 1908 caused no important movements on the stock market, and the 1912 election was practically ignored.

Several weeks after the 1916 election the stock market experienced a drastic reaction, but that was attributed largely to the looming of war clouds on the horizon. The market slumped after the 1920 election, when industry met marked depression ending with time inflation.

By 1924 industrial America was definitely shaking off the post-war depression, and the election of Coolidge signified the birth of this phenomenal market of recent weeks. Stimulated by tremendous growth of America's great corporations and an amazing flow of the world's wealth to these shores, the stock market plunged forward with few setbacks for four years, drawing in to it an army of investors. It was not surprising, then, that the election of Hoover, who had served as secretary of commerce during this remarkable period, should prompt the flowering of this speculative enthusiasm.

The violence of the present market, however, has surpassed most professional expectations. Wall street generally had approved both candidates. The election of Hoover had been taken for granted in most speculative quarters. Many professional traders viewed his election as largely discounted in the wild bull markets of October, and had withdrawn from the market by election time in apprehension of a technical reaction. The day after election, however, brought the wildest "bull" session in the history of the Stock Exchange, and it has been outdone in several successive sessions.

From November 5, 1924, until November 5, 1928, the turning of what Wall street has called the "Coolidge market," The Associated Press average price of 20 industrial issues rose from $103.90 to $229.01. "Allowing for stock split-ups, prices more than doubled in those four years, and several issues increased in value as much as 10 times and more.

In the first 14 sessions of the "Hoover market," beginning November 7, the average price of 20 industrial issues rose to $252.72, increasing about 10 per cent, and the average price of 20 rails gained about five per cent.

These advances were made in the face of enormous profit-taking sales by traders who feared the market was getting out of bounds. During the 14 sessions the upturn was not uniform and the market was not without its ups and downs. The thirteen session carrying the average price of 20 industrial issues down nearly $4, but this loss was more than made up on the fourteenth.

Total sales during two of these 14 sessions were carried within striking distance of the 7,000,000 share mark. Day after day the ticker fell from one to more than two hours late, but traders, although lacking definite knowledge of the market, continued to trade. The ticker, which previously had used about a half roll of tape a day was using as many as two and a half rolls.

Fearing that in such a tremendous market a drastic reaction would result in such a deluge of selling that the ticker would be rendered utterly useless and that with no knowledge of conditions on the floor, traders throughout the country would be seized with panic, the Exchange on November 22 began a new quotation system which eliminated reference to the number of shares involved save the opening. As a result the ticker has been able to keep fairly well abreast of the market.

The violent response of the market to the election of Hoover has resulted also in enormous public speculation. The ticker system has been extended throughout the country, and while about 80 per cent of the orders handled by brokers came in the past from residents of New York city, now about half come from persons living 1,000 miles or more away. Many come by radio, from ships at sea, and by cable and transatlantic telephone from abroad.

The psychological effect of an election was, therefore, never so effective. Trading in former days was dominated by professional traders, at most times keenly analytical. Now the public, easily swayed by enthusiasm is a major factor in the market. Brokers are aware that the public may also be as sensitive as "scare" in addition to remedying the ticker, they have increased on heavy margin requirements, and it is because of this that the moderate own power and carrying a man in sustained flight."

Turning to the widespread use of the airplane today and its rapid development in recent years, Mr. Coolidge said that the "wonderful and spectacular flight to Paris" of Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh and his subsequent country-wide tour, had done "much to make America, six months ago, the nineteenth century was the railroad and steamboat age, he said, while the twentieth "will be known for the development of aeronautics and air transport."

"Air transport means much to the United States," he said, "divided as it is in the west by lofty mountain ranges and deserts. In the early days, it took six months to go from Missouri to the Pacific coast. An airplane has travelled across the continent in less than twenty-four hours. We are stretching out our arms through the air to Canada and to our friends and neighbors on the south."

AIR NOTABLES PRESENT

Men and women who have stirred the imagination of the world with eagle sweeps over wide seas, high mountains and dreary wastes of sand and snow gathered here Wednesday for the conference.

There were also other men whose inventions have thrown light on path that leads to air mastery, men whose money made research possible, aircraft manufacturers — in all, representatives of 40 nations came to be present when President Coolidge delivered the opening address.

And there was Orville Wright, guest of honor, who on Dec. 17, 1903, with his brother Wilbur, since dead, made the first flight in a motor driven plane at Kitty Hawk, N. C. The airplane did not go far but it was the beginning of the time when man's dream born as he watched the birds would be realized. The conference was called to commemorate Wright's flight.

Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh, came to Washington Tuesday. Amelia Earhart, Captain Emory S. Land, Lady Mary Heath, British aviatrix; Lieutenant Lester Maitland, Clarence D. Chamberlain, Arthur C. Goebel, Lieutenant A. F. Hegenberger and others who have become famous through skill, daring, or both, were present, or expected before sessions, conclude Saturday. Among the foreign representatives was Otto Merkle, director of Luft Hansa, German aviation organization, who was expected to take an active part in conference discussions.

Orville Wright heads a delegation of 12 aviation leaders appointed by the president to represent the United States.

reactions of recent weeks have caused no panicky liquidation.

Professional opinion as to the present status of the market is sharply divided. While many major industries are having a record year, and the prospects for next, with new industries such as radio and aviation making mighty strides, are described in glowing terms, there is a feeling in banking circles that the country may have some difficulty in adjusting its financial structure to take care of the tremendous sums tied up in speculation. Brokers' loans in the past four years, as reported by the Federal Reserve, have jumped from less than $2,000,000,000 to more than $5,000,000,000, which is more than the total currency in circulation.

HOOVER CROSSES ANDES TODAY ON GOOD WILL TRIP

Bids Farewell to Chile After Being Entertained by President Ibanez

Los Andes, Chile —(P)—President-Elect Hoover Wednesday was crossing the Andes' mountains on a special train enroute from Santiago to Buenos Aires. He traveled over the highest trans-continental railroad route in either of the Americas, carrying his mission of friendship and understanding one of the mightiest barriers known to man.

Mr. Hoover in crossing the Andes completed his travels to the only important region in the world that he had never visited before.

The train was carried over the mountain by a rack system. On the Chilean side the line has been electrified.

Coming to the summit of the mountain the road ran through a tunnel nearly two miles long and the train in passing through this tunnel crossed the border between Argentina and Chile.

Mr. Hoover bade farewell to Chile after exchanging hearty expressions of friendship between the United States and Chile with his host, president Ibanez. At a luncheon which was the climax of the Chilean welcome, President Ibanez said that the "national spirit of the United States" had given to the world incalculable benefits and an even greater hope for future spiritual and material advancement between the peoples of both continents.

Mr. Hoover said in reply that in both countries there was a common history of building in a new world a new form of government founded upon a new conception of human rights. He asserted, "our economic interests are reciprocal and our progress in prosperity and comfort can only be mutual."

ROAD COMMITTEE MAY PURCHASE SNOW FENCE

The purchase of more snow fence to be used in the fight to keep Outagamie county roads open this winter will be discussed at a special meeting of the Outagamie highway committee at the office of A. Action on the purchase of fence was deferred, however, until Thursday afternoon.

Michigan Lawmaker Says Conditions on Menominee Reservation Are "Bad"

Washington, D. C.—Alleged vice conditions in Wisconsin were before congress Tuesday as it considered the interior department appropriation bill, which makes appropriations for Wisconsin Indians.

Representative Cramton (Rep., Mich.), chairman of the subcommittee of the house appropriations committee in charge of the bill, said he was satisfied that conditions in Shawano county, where the Menominee reservation is located, are bad.

"I made some inspection of Indian affairs in Wisconsin this year, and I found that in the county in which the Menominee reservation is located the conditions as to law enforcement are so bad that vice is flourishing itself in the face of respectable people," Representative Cramton said.

Congress also had before it a statement of Indian Commissioner Charles H. Burke that the same conditions Cramton described on the Menominee reservation existed on reservations near Superior.

Representative Cramton also told the committee there are certain counties where Indians are paying taxes on their holdings.

"I am having some investigation made as to the circumstance, under which that is done and in which counties, having taken the Indian taxes, are reluctant to give them the same consideration they do to whites, in the matter of facilities in the insane asylums, schools and public hospitals," Cramton said.

14 MILES SNOW FENCE IS ERECTED IN COUNTY

Between 13 and 14 miles of snow fence has been erected along the important highways in the county in the annual fight to keep the main thoroughfares open to traffic this winter according to A. G. Brusewitz, county highway commissioner. All snow removal equipment and workers are in readiness for the first call, Mr. Brusewitz said.

While the county now has 13 or 14 miles of snow fence protecting the most vital roads, Mr. Brusewitz said he intended to ask the highway committee to purchase more fence.

"Snow fence is one of the most invaluable aids in a snow removal program and I believe that it is one of the best investments which can be made with a snow removal fund," Mr. Brusewitz said.

SPORTS NEWS OF NEENAH AND MENASHA SOCIETY

ZINN TRACES HISTORY OF KIWANIS CLUB

Birth of Organization Is Pictured by District Governor of Milwaukee

Menasha—Menasha Kiwanis club entertained District Governor Bert P. Zinn of Milwaukee at dinner Tuesday evening at Hotel Menasha, and ladies of Menasha club members, with Neenah club members, their ladies and ladies of Menasha club members as guests. The feature of the evening was a talk on Kiwanis ideals by the guest of honor who called attention to some of the benefits derived from that particular organization.

The speaker reviewed the history of the Kiwanis club from the beginning at the request of George D. Barnes, president of Menasha club, who presided.

"It was in the fall of 1914," said the district governor, "that one, L. S. Brown of Detroit, conceived the idea of forming a business men's club. It was originally organized for trade, but later on when other clubs were organized the wording was changed from we trade to we build."

"There was no fundamental Kiwanis at that time and there were no Kiwanis ideals. The club expanded outside of Detroit and in 1916 the few that were organized met at Cleveland and adopted the national constitution and called it the Kiwanis club. In 1917 there were 52 clubs with a total membership of 5,700."

"Kiwanis had to be more than we trade to exist. The result was a movement was started to change the name to Kiwanis. In 1919 Kiwanis fundamental was born and men of Kiwanis was changed from we trade to we build. There are more than 100,000 in the United States and Canada today."

DEFINES KIWANIS

"What does Kiwanis mean? I cannot give you a concrete explanation of it. It is a tangible thing. It means that every underprivileged child ought to have the same privileges as your child. In our local club we have come fairly well acquainted with men in our community. In small clubs members come in close contact with each other. It is only those that attend the district and international conventions that meet the Kiwanians of neighboring cities."

"Opportunities to become acquainted with neighboring cities should be encouraged. Do you realize that only 10 percent of our membership become acquainted with other Kiwanians. The result is that Kiwanians live within a small radius. We need friends. We must not be satisfied with acquaintances. We must have closer acquaintanceship with men outside of our own circles. In our club we sit at large round tables with ten at a table. This gives each member an opportunity to consult with nine other men."

Before introducing the district governor, George D. Barnes, president, who presided, called on several former officers among them were Mayor Sande, Dr. Siler, Norton J. Williams, and W. H. Nelson of Neenah and E. G. Sonnenberg of Menasha, each of whom made a few remarks.

The program opened with the singing of America and was followed by prayer by the Rev. John Best. The after-dinner program consisted of community singing led by Dr. Dell Curtis with Elnora Owen at the piano; recitations by Aline Ziebell; group of duets by Ernestine Johnson and Lois Schilling of Lawrence conservatory of music with Russell Danburg at the piano; remarks by the chairman, George D. Barnes; address by "District Governor Zinn"; and song, "On Wisconsin."

KIWANIS CLUBS OF TWIN CITIES ARE THREE YEARS OLD

Survival of Organizations Proves Worth, Says Menasha Club President

Menasha—"The Kiwanis clubs of Menasha and Neenah have just cause for keen satisfaction tonight," said George D. Barnes, president of Menasha Kiwanis club, in a brief talk before the Twin City Kiwanis clubs and their ladies Tuesday evening at Hotel Menasha, "for they have from the survival of the first three years of their organization proved the three cardinal points of Kiwanis, that Kiwanis is fundamentally sound; that Kiwanis does embody ideals appealing and lasting; and that Kiwanis, without doubt, we have built up a wholesome respect, a respect for right championing of causes worthy of public adoption. To survive an organization with these facts definitely established is, I feel, an accomplishment of which the membership can justly be proud and I feel, we can rightly sense a real reason for existence and the need for carrying on."

"Aside from the public contact comes the keen joy of intimate friendship. In this comradeship has been built up that continues and grows with each succeeding year. And I can think of no more wholesome or elevating condition than a group such as ours meeting regularly for such spiritual and moral betterment as our progress and contacts afford. I am happy, yes proud, that I am a Kiwanian, as I know each fellow Kiwanian here tonight must also feel."

POINTS OUT OBJECTIVES

"With this consensus of feeling, surely there is no finer objective than that of consecrating ourselves anew to the cause and to the end of making the Kiwanis name in our Twin Cities even more respected and recognized."

"Let us pledge ourselves again to these fine principals and objectives conscious it is only by faith and the willingness to recognize the needs of our fellow men that we can hope for lasting joy and comfort. In our safety zones and in our other various endeavors I feel we have just started our crusade and that we are going to gain an increasingly larger conception of the under-privileged child work and I would like tonight to see ourselves fired with a new determination for helping the needy and less fortunate."

"The foremost thought is to do something that will raise the standard, to add to the sum of human happiness, thus producing harmony. You ask how we can best carry into effect that thought. I reply by seeking out the nobler teachings of Kiwanis and applying them at all times, because Kiwanis teaches the grandest lessons ever imparted to civilized man."

"And now we come to our speaker of the evening. I think that it is a most happy circumstance that we should be rounding out the year's work with our chief executive present to witness the finish and the harvest. I consider ourselves most fortunate in having him for this occasion. I esteem it one of the prize moments of my administration to be able to present our district governor to you, Bert L. Zinn."

NEENAH PLEASED WITH PARKING LAW

Merchants and Aldermen Deny Effort to Revoke Ordinance

Neenah—City officials emphatically deny that the two hour parking law which forbids cars parking on Wisconsin-ave and Commercial-st. longer than two hours at a time is to be rescinded. It has been reported that the council is planning to null the ordinance which was passed more than a year ago but which did not go into effect until a few weeks ago, but this is denied, and police will continue to make arrests. The people at large have taken kindly to the new ruling, especially the merchants who claim that since its enforcement there is plenty room for customers to park their cars during the time they are shopping. Few arrests have had to be made as the people responded to the council's action. The police have been lenient in making arrests by allowing the violator to go with a warning unless the case is out of the ordinary or where the owner of the machine would move from one parking space to the other in order to change the chalk marks on the tire and at the same time remain on the streets where parking was prohibited.

CHRISTMAS TREES LEAD DECORATIONS

Colored Lights and Small Firs Add to Holiday Atmosphere in City

Neenah—Christmas trees predominate in the holiday decorations about the business districts, the trees being used extensively in outside trimmings, along the curbs, in windows and even on top of buildings. In several cases the merchants have strung strings of electric lights out to the trees which are aglow during the evening hours. Nearly every show window has a lighted tree. The city has erected a 40-foot tree at the intersection of Wisconsin-ave and Commercial-st which remains lighted during the entire night. Bergstrom Paper company has erected a similar one at the west end on Main-st. Banks have live trees in front of their stores, many of which are also covered with the new ornamental lighting system on the two principle business streets lights up the town well. The holiday business has started with the last two spring like days the streets being well crowded with Christmas shoppers until the early evening hours. The stores, beginning next Monday evening, are to be kept open evenings.

Most of the amounts levied against individual tax payers have been compiled, according to Carl E. Becher, city clerk, copying of the figures and checking remains to be completed. Real estate figures already have been copied but not checked while personal property figures will be copied by Friday. These too will have to be checked, however.

Hundreds of letters are pouring in to the postoffice every day from cities in every state of the union, with requests from the senders to have them dispatched by the first air mail flight from Appleton next Saturday, according to P. F. Wettengel, acting postmaster. Most of these letters are from philanthropists who have collections of envelopes sent via first air mail flights from all cities where air mail is established.

As yet the number of letters mailed for dispatch via air mail by local patrons is very small. Mr. Wettengel said, indicating that Appleton people are either disinterested in the air mail or that they are waiting until the last minute to get their air mail articles into the office.

GLASS WATER TANK AT PUMPING PLANT SHOWS SEDIMENT

A small glass water tank about three feet long is being installed at the city pumping station and filtration plant, which will enable the visiting public to see the difference in the clarity of river, settled, and filtered water, according to A. J. Hall, manager of the plant. The container is divided into three compartments each having a capacity of a cubic foot of water.

Water coming in from the river will flow into the first compartment, and the visible purification process as the water goes through the three compartments will be discernible by the refraction of rays of light coming through a vitrolite plate at the bottom of the tank. The container will have three powerful electric lamps at the bottom of the plate, and it will be possible to see the amount of sediment in the second compartment, and to compare the water as it flows from the tank with that which entered.

The permits also were $55,000 more than the value of work started in September. The total for the state was considerably lower than in 1927, a decrease of a million and one half dollars in Milwaukee causing the drop.

FORMER OWNER OF MILWAUKEE BALL CLUB TESTIFIES

A. F. Timme Says Sargon Is Most Wonderful Medicine He Ever Used—Spent Hundreds In Search of Health.

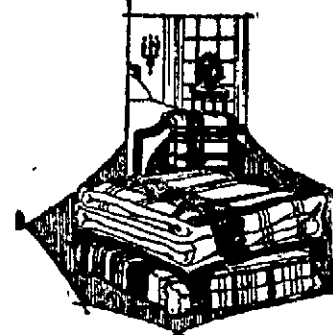

When men of prominence in business, politics or religion lay aside their official cares and go out of their way to endorse a proprietary medicine it is because they have personally tried the preparation and found it of such unusual merit that it takes on the character of a public boon. They believe it will help thousands of other people regain health and happiness, and deem it their duty to give it the weight of their public approval.

One of the outstanding facts about Sargon is the large number of leading men and women from all walks of life who have derived such remarkable benefits from the medicine that they have unhesitatingly given it their unqualified endorsement. The list includes Governors, Senators, Capitalists, Ministers of the Gospel, Labor Leaders many many others.

Among the latest is A. F. Timme, prominent Milwaukee business man, sportsman and clubman. Mr. Timme, who makes his home at the Milwaukee Athletic Club, was for seven years owner of the Milwaukee Baseball Club, and is widely known in the business and social life of this section. Regarding his experience with Sargon Mr. Timme said: "I have taken six bottles of Sargon and the results have been so astoundingly beneficial that I cannot help but praise it. Back in 1924 I had an attack of gall bladder trouble and since that time I have been searching in vain for something to relieve it. I have been through numerous clinics and some of the foremost specialists in the country have treated me. I spent hundreds of dollars without finding the relief I sought and lately the trouble became much worse. My energy and vitality were sapped to the point where I felt worn-out all the time, I was in almost constant pain, and bilious attacks made me dizzy sick. "I read in the papers how Sargon acts on the liver and gall bladder and began taking the medicine, and it has helped me in every way. I no longer have the slightest trouble from my gall bladder, and my general health has been built up wonderfully. My appetite is splendid, my sleep sound and refreshing, and I have gained six pounds in weight. My energy and vitality have increased so much that I feel that I am again in the very best of health. "To think that Sargon has relieved my condition in a few weeks time and at trifling expense when other medicines had failed for years to effect my relief, seems to me no less than astonishing. It is the most remarkable medicine I have ever used."

Sargon may be obtained in Appleton from Voigt's Drug Store. adv.

TROUBLE IN SOUTH AMERICA

It is a curious turn of irony that while President Coolidge was welcoming the Pan-American conference at Washington with eulogies on conciliation and the record of South America in support of peace undertakings, Bolivia and Paraguay were stripping for war. And there is the further strange fact that the matters over which they are quarreling are differences that ought to be settled amicably by direct negotiation, differences that in the failure of direct agreement ought to be submitted to arbitration, differences that the Kellogg multi-lateral treaty would require to be adjusted without recourse to arms.

The incident shows how easy it is to forget professions of peace in the face of real or imaginary grievances that are supposed to touch national honor or sovereignty. War between Bolivia and Paraguay would be a calamity, not only to them but as to the reputation and sobriety of all South America. The true interests of South America lie in peaceful development of its social, economic and political institutions. Populated largely by peoples who are quick to take offense and who are not noted for self-restraint, South America has throughout its history labored under a sort of moral handicap. The difference in race texture between nations of Latin origin and those of Nordic and Anglo-Saxon is well illustrated by the experiences of the United States with its neighbors to the north and south. With the former there has never been a controversy that endangered peace, while with the latter we have been embroiled in a constant succession of disputes that often terminated in the use of force.

There has been a deal of internecine strife in South America and more in Central America—strife of the sort that reflects instability and insecurity. During the last twenty or thirty years it must, however, be said for South America that it has become far more tranquil and orderly and has taken a commendable part in international peace movements. The fear and danger of revolutions and external warfare have greatly receded. We have had a most praiseworthy example of self-restraint in the protracted effort of Chile and Peru to compose the Tacna-Arica boundary dispute.

Perhaps the president's message to the Pan-American conference may have a salutary effect upon Bolivia and Paraguay and influence them to a course of reconciliation. Already other South American nations are demanding arbitration or mediation, and emphasizing the fact that it would be a most inopportune time to precipitate war when the attention of the whole United States is centered on South America and things South American by reason of Mr. Hoover's presence there. The incident, nevertheless, shows how much there is to be done to set up practical and effective instruments of peace. The psychology of war is still heavily to be reckoned with.

NO CAUSE FOR COMPLAINT

The John Doe proceedings in Dane county instituted by the super-Progressives to investigate the legitimacy of campaign expenditures by and for Walter J. Kohler for the Republican nomination for governor ends with a verdict of "no cause for complaint." In other words, the investigation proved that everything was regular and proper. Nothing was brought out as an actual or moral violation of the corrupt practices act.

The whole move turns out to be a fiasco, just as every sensibly-minded man in Wisconsin believed it would. Presumably Mr. Kohler will now be permitted to assume the duties of the governorship in peace. Not only is he completely vindicated, but those who have sought to obstruct and prevent his entrance into public service are thoroughly discredited.

SAVING OUR PRESIDENTS

President Coolidge in contributing an article to an anniversary number of the St. Louis Post-Dispatch reveals that he has a very human side after all. As he nears the close of his administration he takes a sort of retrospective and introspective look at the presidency. He finds that it is a prodigious job, that its ordinary responsibilities, plus the pressure that comes from the outside for speeches and other activities, are back-breaking and will undermine even the strongest constitution unless the president is surrounded with every possible restraint, declines nearly all invitations and has a fair amount of relaxation.

Mr. Coolidge believes that the health and physical condition of the president are of the utmost importance, and that the nation owes it to itself as well as to its chief executive to do all that it can to promote both. Mr. Coolidge flatters himself that he comes out of the White house in about as good condition as any president who has preceded him. He has not done this because of "a particularly robust constitution," but by keeping regular habits and hours, taking a breathing spell or walking or other like exercise each day, using vibrating machines in his room and refusing to be dragged into politics and public functions beyond his powers of endurance.

As a means of relaxation for presidents Mr. Coolidge puts forward the suggestion, which is not altogether new, that the nation provide a rural estate within easy striking distance of Washington where the chief executive can go for week-ends, or at any time he feels the necessity, and obtain seclusion and complete freedom of action. One of the hardest things the president has to do is to squeeze out time for his personal employment, whether alone or with those of his own selection. From morning to night he is harassed by officials, politicians, guests and whatnot. He cannot step out of the White house but what he is conversation, and to entertainments that are essentially artificial and always in the public gaze.

The exactions of the presidency were too much for Harding, too much for Wilson, too much for even Roosevelt. Few men have outlived them long. We think Mr. Coolidge's suggestion is eminently one of common sense and justice. The matter should be brought before congress and pressed for attention until action is obtained. If congress will not listen to the president's advice about so important, even critical a matter, then the country ought to interest itself to the point of compelling congress to act. The president's advice and his recommendations in a matter of this kind ought to be final.

WORLD MUST DISARM

There is so much talk about disarmament it can hardly fail to produce results. The subject will not down in Great Britain. So eminent an authority as Lord Cecil says the great military establishment sustained by England is ruining the country and breaking the backs of the people. He is not alone among Englishmen of this opinion. In the United States the demand for a real and sensible reduction of armament is growing daily. The fact that congress may be about to authorize a large expansion of our cruiser tonnage has served to augment this demand. If the construction is voted and actually carried out it will be because of the failure of statesmen to solve the disarmament problem. It may be that we can hold British obstinacy responsible, we do not know. In the meantime there is renewed activity within the League of Nations to press for another naval conference.

It is a crucial hour for disarmament, but the odds are in its favor. All of the argument one hears about the necessity for being armed with big sticks is fallacious, much of it is provocative and some of it just twaddle. It is a singular fact, as Mussolini points out, that in the midst of all of the peace talk "the truth is that the whole world is again arming itself." The statesmanship of the world is undergoing the greatest test since 1914. It can hardly afford to prove incompetent or unequal to the task. Much more is involved than the question of future peace or war. In the background political stability of governments and the economic well-being of millions of people are at stake.

AN EPIDEMIC OF SEPTIC SORE THROAT

Streptococcus is the more or less familiar name of one of the meanest, most voracious and most versatile of all the microbial enemies civilized man has to contend with. "Even the lady is beginning to comprehend," I gather, that when this germ is found hanging around the premises something atrocious is likely to happen. And the villain seldom fails to measure up to reputation.

In the village of Lee, Mass., with a population of slightly over 4,000 there was an epidemic of septic sore throat this summer. The first case was reported July 1, and within a period of two weeks there were approximately 600 cases of septic sore throat in this community of 4,000 people, with 36 deaths. That was certainly as sudden and frightful as a calamity could be. And the epidemic terminated as abruptly as it began.

It seems that the village authorities on July 7 commenced enforcement of an ordinance requiring the pasteurization of all milk. Pasteurization means a kind of parboiling for the purpose of killing dangerous germs in the milk. The milk, in the pasteurization process, is simply heated up to a temperature of 140 or 145 degrees F. (of course the temperature must be carefully recorded by thermometer) and kept at that temperature, no higher, and no lower, for 20 minutes, then allowed to cool again. This degree of heat has been found sufficient to kill tubercle, typhoid or diphtheria bacilli, as well as the streptococcus of septic fever, gone through the infection. The last new case of septic sore throat in the Lee epidemic was reported July 14, and this was probably a case of contact infection (the patient had been taking care of one of the 600 invalids), the contact infection occurring in very few instances in this epidemic, unlike some other epidemics of similar character and origin.

The Massachusetts health authorities have been unable to determine positively whether the streptococci that were found to be the cause of the sore throat in this epidemic came originally from the infected udder of one of the cows or from one of the milk handlers. They did obtain "pure cultures" of a hemolytic streptococcus from one of the cows and from several of the milk handlers. By the way, "hemolytic" is just a gang name for one of the most virulent strains of streptococcus; the word means literally "blood destroying."

Among the roles in the repertoire of the streptococcus we must list, along with septic sore throat, scarlet fever, erysipelas and now and then a case of acute general septicemia or "blood poisoning" without apparent wound of entrance. Any of these manifestations of streptococcus infection may be traced, in not a few outbreaks, to milk that has been contaminated either by the diseased udder of the cow or by some diseased handler somewhere between cow and consumer. It is because there is so much danger of such pollution or contamination of the milk market, or peddled in cities that the health authorities in most cities require the pasteurization of all market milk. This does not refer to certified milk, which is absolutely pure and safe in its raw state.

I have often mentioned here the objections to pasteurization but the principal one is overcome readily enough. If the baby must be raised on pasteurized milk be sure he gets a daily ration of any fresh fruit or vegetable juice or even factory canned tomato juice, to provide the sunny preventing vitamin that is destroyed in milk by pasteurization.

men here see of his making sure that former Governor Henry Allen doesn't get the job. At any rate, Curtis himself is quite likely to spend his Christmas holidays at home and engage busily in state politics during that period.

It's entirely clear that the Kansas veteran is by no means looking to his elevation to the vice presidency as the culmination of his political career. He has no intention of retiring on his honors. On the contrary, not only does he seem to have definite plans for recapturing whatever degree of leadership from his grasp in the election of Reed as governor, but signs are not lacking that his presidential ambitions are as hearty and flourishing as ever.

Just how a man of Curtis' Washington experience could live in daily sight of the busts of the vice presidents which line the walls of senate corridors and have any confidence that it's a job with a future is not clear. In his life time, only two vice presidents have advanced to the White House, both times through intervention of death to create a vacancy.

WATSON NEXT IN LINE

Senator Jim Watson of Indiana, whose political ambitions have at times ranged from the governorship to the presidency, is the man most immediately concerned in the struggle to succeed Curtis as majority leader of the senate. He is now deputy leader, a job bearing about the same relations to the actual leadership as the vice presidency does to the presidency, except that there is no law of succession.

If the senate does nothing about it when Curtis resigns, Watson will become leader automatically and probably will so function for the tag end of the seventeenth congress. It would be unheard of for his party colleagues to put somebody in over his head at this stage.

When the senate of the seventy-first congress organizes, however, a different situation presents itself and Watson already has two stout rivals, Wesley Jones of Washington, hero of the unanimous senate vote on flood control and McNary of Oregon, farm block leader. Watson has not announced his own plans, but, as one senator puts it: "Jim is mighty valuable about what his friends are doing."

All records were broken in 1811 when the President's message to Congress reached Philadelphia in nine hours and a half and Boston in 64 hours.

GOVERNMENT NEEDS BUSINESS MEN, IS KOHLER'S OPINION

Training Makes Them Qualified to Serve State in Business-like Manner

Chicago—(AP)—Governor-elect Walter J. Kohler of Wisconsin believes business men whose training fits them to deal with governmental problems should be willing to serve the state even at personal sacrifice. He told this to persons attending the 21st annual dinner meeting of the Illinois Manufacturers' association here Tuesday night.

KOHLER In an address on The Manufacturer in Public Life, Governor-elect Kohler explained that if existing evils in government are to be remedied, the manufacturer's obligation lies with an interest in public affairs and service to the state.

"The principle problems of government today are social and economic rather than political," the speaker said. "They demand the same administrative ability required for the successful management of a large business. While the state is not organized for purpose of profit, it is none the less a great business institution collecting and spending the people's money. It is charged with the duty of rendering them the best service at the least cost. I cannot see how it can satisfactorily discharge a single one of its functions unless it is first of all a well-managed institution."

Governor-elect Kohler drew an analogy between business and government in which he pointed out that economies of business are needed in government; budgeting and long-range planning are needed in each, and business men, fit to deal with such problems are necessary for the offices.

"Taxation is a social and economic problem and so are conservation, farm relief, highways, waterways, education, protection of children, care of the socially incapable, public health and most of the other things with which government properly concerns itself," the speaker said.

"When these economic and social questions are thrust into the arena of political controversy, the issues become confused instead of clarified. Yet these questions cannot be kept out of politics unless we have honest and competent administration of government for the benefit of all the people."

In answer to campaign charges of his own prosperity, Mr. Kohler said he answered: "I believe in prosperity and that all the people should have the greatest opportunity to share in it. I believe that government can administer for the benefit of all the people and should do something toward achieving this ideal."

The Outagamie-co highway committee has been asked to submit data and pictures to the state highway committee for a special article which will be printed in Badger Highways, the official magazine of that department. The article will appear in 1929 in connection with a series of articles about highway committees of each county of the state.

Material which the committee has been asked to submit includes: Data of term of service of each member; expiration of the present term; an outline of special achievements or activities during the present committee's term of service; dates and designation of connections with other branches of highway activities aside from the office; other information of general interest.

TIGHTEN LAWS FOR LEGISLATIVE JOBS

Madison—(AP)—A. E. Garey, secretary of the civil service commission which submits a list of persons eligible for employment by the legislature, has announced that students who cannot devote eight hours to work in the daytime and all women will be prohibited from holding positions in the 1929 legislature.

He added, however, that students who cannot devote the required amount of time may take examinations for the few night time positions.

Mr. Garey pointed out that students were barred in 1923 but in 1925, when he became secretary, wishing to help students, he permitted them to take examinations and obtain posts. Legislators that year, he said, complained because students were not able to devote time.

This year, he said, because of the complaint, the commission decided to bar those students who cannot prove they can give eight day-time hours to the positions.

FRONTPIECE CONTEST PLANNED FOR YEARBOOK

To get a frontpiece worthy of use in the 1930 Lawrence Ariel, the year book of the college, a contest has been announced by Ross Cannon, Appleton, editor-in-chief of the book. The sketch should depict Lawrence traditions. It may be a campus scene, an entrance to Main hall, or a sketch of Lawrence life and will appear in the front part of the annual facing the title page.

The contest will close Jan. 10. Sketches must be received prior to this time. They should in some way fit in with the general theme of the book which depicts the history of Lawrence from the laying of the cornerstone of Main hall in 1853 to the building of the new Alexander gymnasium.

What Does Her Future Hold?

Here are two recent pictures of little Princess Elizabeth, niece of the Prince of Wales, and his favorite little playmate, who may some day be Britain's queen. Only two persons are now ahead of her in line of succession to the throne—Wales and her father, the Duke of York. When Queen Victoria was the same age, seven lives stood between her and the throne. The little princess is shown with her nurse and, below receiving the greetings of street crowds.

This Baby Princess May Rule British Empire

BY MILTON BRONNER

London—The third of the British Empire just as present happens to be a tiny little girl of approximately two and one-half years of age.

This young lady is none other than the Princess Elizabeth, daughter of the Duke and Duchess of York—the most famous and popular child in all England. Part of her fame and popularity come because she is just naturally adorable; but part comes because she is heiress presumptive to the British throne. If the Prince of Wales remains a bachelor, the throne on his death will go to the Duke of York—from whom it would descend to the princess, who would then become Queen Elizabeth II.

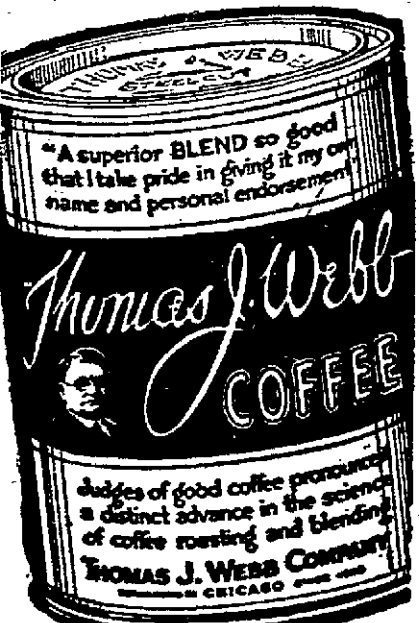

Princess Elizabeth, prime favorite with her royal uncle, the Prince of Wales, and the liking is mutual.

PLAYS WITH PRINCE OF WALES The prince visits her parents' home often, and whenever he does so he is sure to spend a great deal of his time in the nursery. He gets down on his royal hands and knees, for instance, and plays bear, horse or dog for her with great gusto. He builds her houses of blocks and lets her knock them down, while both shout with laughter. He takes her on his knee and tells her stories.

Not long ago the princess was taken to Wales' apartment for a visit. When she entered his living room she undertook to show him how she had learned to curtsy. Unfortunately, she lost her balance and sat down rather hard, looking up in pained bewilderment, not knowing whether to laugh or cry. The prince was equal to the situation, however; he returned the curtsy, and managed to upset himself just as she had done—and then he laughed loudly and persuaded her that falling down was all part of the game.

Princess Elizabeth is a well-bred, amiable youngster, but on occasion she reveals a rather regal disposition, just as certain more humbly-born children have been known to do. Once her mother took her to a photographer's, and the princess refused to pose. The photographer tried to pacify her with a "watch-the-birdie" whirlygig, but she snatched it from him and threw it on the floor. Her mother instantly reproved her.

"BETTY DOES WHAT SHE WANTS"

"Why, Betty, that's naughty," she exclaimed. But Betty refused to pick it up, as she was told to do. "Betty must do as she is told," said her mother. "Betty do what she wants," said the child promptly. "Then Betty is a naughty, naughty child," said her mother. Betty was undismayed; she replied, happily, "Betty naughty, but she do what she wants."

The British public has been quick to realize that the little princess may some day ascend to the throne of England, and as a result there have been more newspaper articles about her than about any other baby in the empire. Already she is getting mail in enormous quantities; her mother has had to retain an extra secretary simply to handle the letters that come to the little girl.

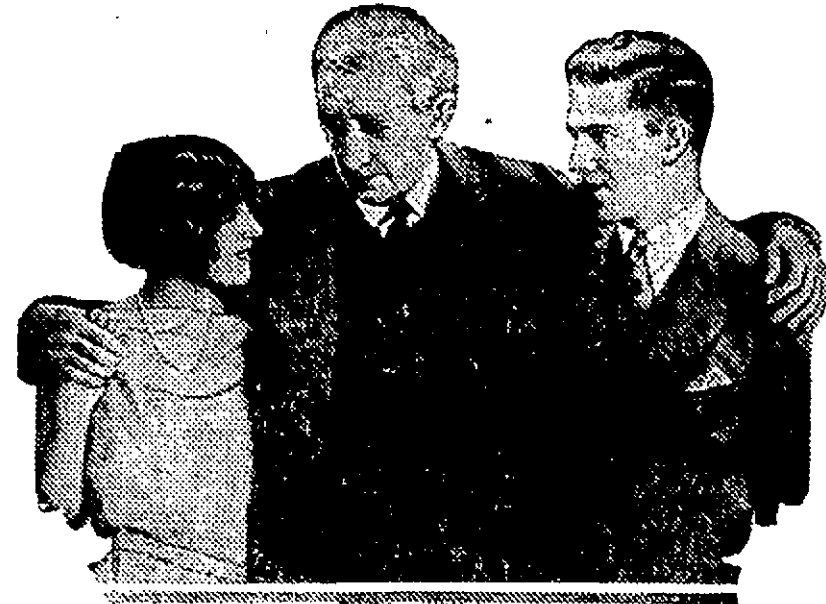

When Princess Elizabeth was nine months old the Duke and Duchess of York left her with their parents here and went on a world tour. The little princess' fame had gone ahead of them. At every town they visited they were given some gift or token to take home to "Princess Bess." Among these articles was the image of a kangaroo carved out of solid gold, presented by workers in the Australian gold fields.

The princess' daily life is much like that of any other child of well-to-do parents. Her rooms are on the top floor of her parents' house in London, and a highly capable nurse is with her most of the time. In fair weather a crowd collects in front of the house every afternoon in the hope of getting a glimpse of the princess, and the Duchess of York tries to accede to the crowd's wishes whenever it is possible.

RECEIVES ROYAL HONORS Already the princess receives royal honors. The dignified footman who opens the door of her father's house always bows to her when she toddles past a thing that makes her laugh every time. The policeman on the corner salutes her gravely when he sees her, and she always raises her little hand to return the greeting. When her mother brings her into the living room to be shown to visitors, no one present ever forgets that Princess Elizabeth is the third curtsy as they approach her, and the gentlemen bow with the utmost solemnity.

When she grows a little older she will receive an education befitting the exalted station she may some day hold—which means that she will have to become expert in the use of four or five languages and will have to have a long schooling in history, economics, politics and statecraft. Her girlhood and young womanhood will be accompanied by the same restrictions and publicity that have attended the Prince of Wales.

But just now she doesn't know anything about all of that. She may be the third lady of the land, a direct descendant of William the Conqueror and Alfred the Great, and a possible future queen of England; but at this moment she's just a happy, lovable little girl with golden curls and a constant smile.

In line of succession, only two persons now stand between the little princess and the British throne—the Prince of Wales and the Duke of York. When Queen Victoria was a child two and a half years old seven persons stood between her and the throne of the empire.

"Tell Tony!"

For a wild half minute, as she wept stormily, Crystal considered telling Tony Tarver the whole truth and nothing but the truth about Pablo Mendoza. She would tell her that there was no "Pablo Valencio," gentleman and artist, but a Pablo Mendoza, whom a kind God had sent to her to make good her lies—a Pablo who worked as a common hand" on the Grayson dairy farm. But the impulse passed.

"Of course, you're right," she sobbed, dabbing at her mascara-smudged eyes with a sopping handkerchief. "It is Pablo. But not what you think," she added hastily as Tony clenched menacing fists. "He—he's asked me to marry him! And he would have, too, Crystal told herself, if she'd given him the chance."

"Good work, Crystal!" Tony applauded, sitting back on her heels and regarding her chum with pleased, brilliant blue-diamond eyes. "Tears of joy?"

"N-no!" Crystal admitted, braving into a fresh torrent of grief. "You don't mean you've turned down a woe like that?" Tony marvelled. "Of course I've got an anti-marriage complex, but—gosh, Crystal, I thought you wanted to get married! I thought that was the major idea!"

Tony had given Crystal her cue, and between her real grief and the necessity of keeping up the fiction of "Pablo Valencio," poor Crystal needed help sorely. "Do you think I'm utterly selfish?" she sobbed. "I love him too much to marry him!" And that happened, wonderfully, to be true she told herself. A snob for a wife would make Pablo Mendoza absolutely wretched. But she could not go on telling near-truths and fiction was demanded. "Pablo has to go to Paris. Of course he has to go to Paris. I've told him so a hundred times."

"Then why in the name of my sainted ancestors don't you go to Paris with him?" Tony demanded sternly.

"He has no money at all," Crystal retorted dourly. "I'd have to work and all I know how to do is stenography, and my French is terrible. I'd have to learn it all over again and French shorthand, too. Oh, it's no use, Tony! I've already sent him back his presents."

"Given his sketches?" Tony demanded incredulously. "You poor blighted little sap! I'd like to kick you, but I suppose you're feeling bad enough as it is. I'm not feeling any too jolly myself," she added morosely.

Crystal was instantly diverted and sympathetic. "Dick?" she breathed.

"Of course! He was one of the party. I'm beginning to think I must be a magnet, as some of the older men tell me solemnly, for Dick is never more than a few feet away. He's hanging around outside now—going to put up a stiff argument about my going out with Tim Parker tonight!" Tony answered. "Have you met Tim? I'm trying to get up a push for him, to cure myself of Dick. And believe me, Crystal, that boy is really a disease with me. But I'm running a temperature right now."

"But what did he do on this trip to Hangman's Hill?" Crystal asked.

"Oh, nothing," Tony shrugged, "except to try to force me to elope with him. We were fifty miles from Hangman's Hill Saturday night before I realized what the good-looking brat was up to."

NEXT: Tony's mistaken generosity.

ETHEL

THEY MAY HAVE BEEN COAT-GETTERS BUT—

HOW WHITE LIES TURN INTO BLACK

BY ALLENE SUMNER

I wish that parents would learn to pay more attention to a child's motives if he tells a lie, rather than the lie itself.

John lied! They can't get over that. All they see is the great big lie hung around John's neck like a millstone.

He was afraid of them or he wouldn't have told it in the first place. And the more they make him afraid of them the more lies he will tell in self defense.

About 99 out of a hundred lies are pretty harmless, at least in the beginning. They are usually not malicious but are caused by weakness. That is why I say, instead of attacking too much importance to the lie, look behind it and see what the motive was in telling it. And try to correct the motive. It may begin with yourself.

Let us follow the evolution of a white lie.

John's mother has baked a batch of doughnuts and put them in a covered bowl in the pantry. Then she writes a note and lays it on the kitchen table. "Have gone to the dressmaker's. Will be back at 5. Don't touch the doughnuts."

John comes in from school starving hungry. He smells the delicious tantalizing odor of the doughnuts. He follows his nose. The trail leads through the kitchen. He sees the note—and reads. His face falls. No doughnuts!

FIRST TEMPTATION

He'll just take a look. Oh, how tempting and beautiful they look. He lifts one to his nose and sniffs. He licks at a fleck of sugar. Now if he had chosen the other way and gone through the pantry first, he'd have eaten one before he saw that old note.

He is very hungry. Now just suppose—He fails. He eats two.

"I'm sorry, Mother! I—I—You see, I ate two doughnuts and then I saw your note afterwards. I was awfully sorry, but it was too late."

But circumstantial evidence gave him away. He had dropped the note in the doughnut bowl. His mother found it under the lid.

A hard whipping. John had told a terrible lie! Horrible!

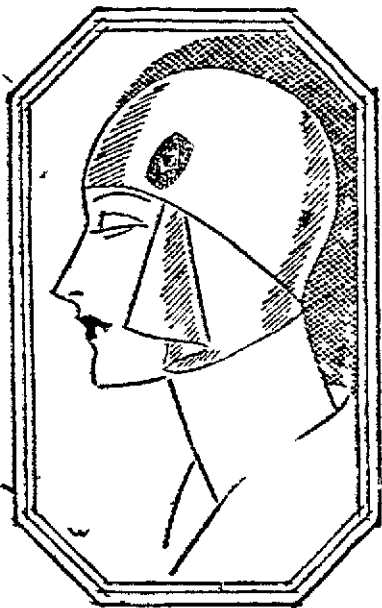

How foolish! In the first place no sensible mother would write such a note. Why couldn't John have had a doughnut, or two? It wasn't a malicious lie that John had told.

When I got John by himself I'd given him a man to man talk on trust and sportsmanship. I'd have said, "See here, son John, a fib has no place around here. You see, we come of a family that trusts its members. If you ever do what you shouldn't come and tell me about it. We'll talk it over. No more lies, John."

But that whipping made John more afraid. Later on he got expert at covering his tracks. Then his lies turned gray—then black.

To caramelize sugar, place one cup of sugar in an iron frying pan, heat very slowly and stir constantly with a wooden spoon until the mixture becomes rich deep brown color. Add one cup of water and boil for 3 minutes. Cool and pour into a bottle or jar and store in the ice box. When a cake, cookie or custard recipe calls for caramel, it is ready for use.

Mince Meat, Pre-Norman Dish Brings Good Luck

BY SISTER MARY

NEA Service Writer

CHRISTMAS, with its many traditions and age old ceremonies, brings some rather interesting superstitions about some of the dishes we particularly associate with its festivities.

Mince meat, with its pre-Norman background, especially seems inseparable with Christmas.

To make a piece of mince pie at Christmas, according to superstition, means that "bad luck" will attend one during the year.

The apples in the pie portend health and happiness. Each member of the family should have a hand in the making of the mince meat even if it's no more than giving it a stir. He who stirs shares in the good luck for the household during the coming year.

MINCE MEAT

Two pounds lean beef, 1-4 pound beef suet, 4 pounds chopped apples, 2 pounds seeded raisins, 1 pound cleaned currants, 1-2 pound shredded citron, 1-4 pound candied orange peel, 1-4 pound candied lemon peel, 2 pounds brown sugar, 1 quart sweet cider, 1 cup molasses, 1 cup stock, 2 teaspoon salt, 1 nutmeg (grated), 1 tablespoon cinnamon, 2 teaspoons cloves, 2 teaspoons allspice, 1 cup preserved cherries or strawberries (optional).

Any part of the beef can be used that is clear lean meat. The heart and tongue were favorites with our grandmothers.

Cook meat in boiling water to cover until tender, adding salt when about half done. Add water as necessary and remove scum as it rises. When meat is tender, boil rapidly to reduce stock to one cup. Let meat cool in stock. Remove meat from stock and carefully cut away any bits of fat, bone or gristle. Put meat through a food chopper and add stock which has been strained.

Add suet finely minced, apples pared, cored and chopped, coarsely chopped raisins and all remaining ingredients except the preserves. Cook over a low fire about two hours, stirring to prevent sticking. Add preserves, bring to boiling point and seal in sterilized jars.

Mince meat improves with standing. The spices and flavors blend into a fragrant and delicious mixture.

If cider is not at hand and sweet spiced vinegar left from a jar of sweet pickled fruit and enough strong coffee to make the quart needed is an excellent substitute. If cooking sherry is wanted it should be added just before canning and sealing. Do not cook it with the other ingredients.

When you are making up your Christmas box for some one, why not add an attractive jar of mince meat? With its message of good luck, health and happiness it embodies the very spirit of Christmas.

CANNED FRUITS AND VEGETABLES

Full of Vitamins, Should Be Eaten Daily, Says Doctor

Dr. Morris Fishbein, Editor of the Journal of the American Medical Association, recently wrote in the New York Telegram about canned fruits and vegetables. If all of the women could read this article, more canning factories would have to be built in a hurry.

He makes this startling statement: "Canned tomatoes, and canned spinach have been tested three years after canning and the evidence did not indicate any appreciable loss in vitamins. Indeed the canned tomatoes after three years were as rich in vitamins as raw tomatoes. Canned strawberries were also found to equal raw strawberries in vitamin content." He describes how canned cabbage, peas, spinach, apples and peaches served with cereals for breakfast and with ice cream for dessert. There is health in delicious canned fruits and vegetables. Sweeten the vegetables to taste when preparing them for serving. The Sugar Institute

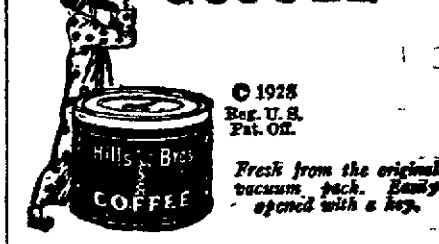

Serve your family liberally with canned fruits for breakfast and for dessert, and serve them liberally with canned vegetables and fruits for luncheon and dinner. Canned peaches, apricots, apples, pears, or strawberries are delicious served with cereals for breakfast and with ice cream for dessert. There is health in delicious canned fruits and vegetables. EGG PRICES LOW BECAUSE OF WEATHER

Warm Temperature Encouraging Laying, Kaukauna Grocer Explains

Kaukauna—There is a slump in the egg market in this vicinity, and if the present weather keeps up the slump will continue and the market will go lower, according to N. M. Haupt, local grocer. The mild weather the people are enjoying is causing chickens to lay and consequently the price of eggs will be low, he pointed out.

"Our farmers are beginning to specialize in marketing eggs, and the grade obtainable in this vicinity is very good," he said. "In fact they are beginning to make more of the egg business than the dairy business and they are finding it more profitable."

Merchants are following the Chicago market as closely as possible, but if they are without eggs they will pay more than the market price. In this city there is a good supply of eggs and the price is below the Chicago market. In some places merchants are paying above the Chicago market, due to weather conditions.

In past years men would buy up a supply of eggs and then sell them in the winter when the price was high. They could do this because no one was well posted on the egg market or studied the situation well enough to steady the market. This has not been done much during the past few years because there is not so much variation in the price of eggs at different seasons of the year, said Mr. Haupt. Men have studied the subject and raise chickens so that there is a more steady supply during all seasons. Anyone who would store eggs now would be unable to make much money, he said.

One of the big factors in the egg market is the amount the consumer uses. If the consumer uses a large number of eggs the price will be high and if the consumer uses only a few the price will drop. In the past few years people have begun to eat more eggs. This is probably due to the fact that the cost of meat has risen, he said. The egg situation is affected by the locality it is in, he summarized.

LOCOMOTIVE HITS AUTO TRUCK BUT DRIVER IS UNHURT

Kaukauna—Isaac Solberg narrowly escaped serious injury about 5:30 Tuesday morning when a Chicago and Northwestern Railroad switch engine struck the car which he was driving over the crossing near the south side Kalupa bakery truck toward the north side when an engine coming from the shops pushing a "dead" engine struck him. The back of the "dead" engine struck the left side of his car and lifted the rear of the car about five feet into the air. The car was then deposited on a guide post on the end of the canal bridge. The engine was going slowly and did not smash through the car, the car glancing off after being struck. Solberg was unhurt but the rear of the car was badly damaged.

COACH IS SINGING BLUES OVER CAGE HOPES AT SCHOOL

Too Much of Material Is Green, Says Ott in Reviewing Prospects

Kaukauna—Coach Elmer Ott looks upon the approaching basketball season of the local high school with a frown. The prospects, he says, are green and he has been unable to hold a scrimmage thus far. The squad numbers 22 and in order to handle the large number of candidates, he has divided them into two sections, A and B. One squad is composed of men who have had basketball experience in other years and the other is composed of freshmen.

The B squad, which contains a large number of last year's men, practices at a different time than the A squad. In this way the coach has more time to devote to the individual player. Members of the B squad are Captain E. Farrell, R. Sager, M. Ester, M. Miller, H. Doering, R. Main, R. Landreman, J. Tooman, R. Grogan and J. Schmidt. Members of the A squad are D. Dix, J. Nole, Koch, M. and J. VanLieshout, W. Mooney, R. Driessen, Haas, G. Paschen, Rogers and N. Dix. A number of the boys have been unable to attend the practice sessions on account of colds and grip, which is prevalent in the city.

Kaukauna's first game of the season will be against Appleton, an ancient rival. Kaukauna was trimmed twice by Appleton last year and the outlook so far this year is anything but promising.

Where War's Drums Rumble in South America

Above is Dr. Hermendo Siles, president of Bolivia, now engaged in a boundary dispute that threatens war with its South American neighbor, Paraguay. The Bolivian capital at La Paz, scene of anti-Paraguayan demonstrations by a frenzied public, is also shown. The map at the right shows "The Chaco," the disputed territory between Bolivia and Paraguay. "The Chaco" is a swampy, desolate land—disputed by Bolivia and Paraguay for many years—which has been crossed by few white men since the days of the Spanish explorers. It is rich in forests and believed to contain oil. It was at an outpost on the Paraguay river that Bolivian and Paraguayan troops clashed recently, 22 of the former being killed or wounded. The inset map of South America shows the scene of the trouble.

RURAL CAGERS TEAM IS ORGANIZED AT FOREST JUNCTION

Expect to Play First Game at Community Hall on Dec. 20

Forest Junction—After some delay occasioned by inability to secure the desired number of players, a local basketball team has been organized, and arrangements are pending for an opening game to be played at the community hall here on Thursday evening, Dec. 20. It has been announced by Claude Thomas, who has been named as business manager of the group.

Under the leadership of Mitchell Stanelle, manager of a former team here, a group of players including Raymond and Harry Stanelle, Cornelius Kosmoskey, Wilmer Huebner and Sidney Tilley, is being placed in training for the season's activities. The team continues under the former name of Rural Cagers. Practice games played at the community hall here have disclosed lack of system in training younger players to replace the older ones as they retire, and there has been some sentiment expressed in favor of reviving the athletic association of other days in order to promote a more systematic procedure.

MILLIONS AWAIT BULLETINS FROM KING'S SICKBED

Doctors With Ancient Titles in Constant Attendance on Monarch

BY MILTON BRONNER

London — Anxious, sympathetic crowds surge up to the iron fence surrounding Buckingham Palace. Strangely silent, they stand patiently for hours, eagerly watching every movement within the grounds hoping that fresh word will come from within the sick room concerning the condition of their king.

To the remote ends of the largest empire in the world, subjects of the British crown listen for radio bulletins or gather to await telegraphic despatches.

As the Prince of Wales dashed over land and sea to reach the bedside of his father, frequent messages, some of reassurance, some of alarming doubt, were sent to him from the palace.

All of these bulletins, so eagerly awaited by millions of persons, are signed:

"Stanley Hewett."

"Dawson of Penn."

The official title of "Surgeon Apothecary to the King" belongs to Sir Stanley Hewett.

He is the King's family physician and filled a similar position with the late Queen Alexandra, the King's mother. He was educated at Cambridge University and is on the staff of the St. Thomas and is the West London Hospital. He is 48 years old and was knighted by the king in 1921.

Bertrand Dawson, first Lord of Penn, has the title of Physician in Ordinary to the King. This title, together with that of Sir Stanley Hewett, dates back several centuries. The Surgeon Apothecary is supposed to be in constant attendance on the king, where the Physician in Ordinary is sent for only in cases which require consultation.

Prior to his present post, Lord Dawson was physician to King Edward Seventh. He is Dean of the Faculty of Medicine and a member of the Senate of the University of London. He was educated at University College and served at the front during the war. He is a specialist on diabetes and gastric troubles and has published several books on these subjects.

He was created first Lord Dawson in 1920 and is the first physician in modern times to have been raised to the peerage. Lord Dawson is noted for his outspoken pronouncements on many controversial topics. After a visit to the United States, he said he was still against prohibition and still believed that a moderate drink now and then was good for men. He also caused wide comment by speaking in favor of birth control.

King's Doctors

The world waits breathlessly for the brief bulletins issued by these two men, physicians to King George of England. Top is Bertrand Dawson, first physician in modern times to be raised to the peerage. Sir Stanley Hewett, bottom, is Surgeon Apothecary to the King.

STAGE And SCREEN

"HIS PRIVATE LIFE"

Refreshing comedy-drama is "His Private Life," starring Adolphe Menjou, a Paramount production, at Fischer's Appleton theatre, last times Wednesday. It is refreshing comedy-drama in the sense that Menjou gives his admirable characterization of a swank, sophisticated Parisian boulevardier, the type of character that has delighted admirers of Menjou.

In a story written originally for the star by Ernest Vajda and Keene Thompson, famous playwrights, Menjou rises to the occasion the story demands in an exceptionally fine manner. His wife, the beautiful Kathryn Carver, who has the leading feminine role opposite him, contributes no little to the performance and the two combine in giving two hours of real screen entertainment.

Margaret Livingston the "vamp," also comes in for a share of the honors and fairly breathes Parisian atmosphere throughout the picture. Eugene Pallette, who handles the comedy in the film, delights as the jealous husband of the "vamp." Menjou, as the round-the-town blade, tells a friend that no longer will he pursue beautiful women. The words are hardly out of his mouth when Miss Carver, as Helene, glides by. Menjou promptly goes in pursuit, but for all his previous experiences, he finds her exceedingly difficult to approach and it is not until he uses a former love that finally he is enabled to win her. In the interim many laughs are furnished and no little gentle excitement on the part of the jealous husband.

Frank Tuttle, termed the "ace" director of comedy-drama, handled the megaphone and his deft touches in the humorous, romantic and ex-

"COMPANIONATE MARRIAGE"

One of the outstanding motion pictures of the year is the First National film, "Companionate Marriage," which opens an engagement of 4 days at the Elite Theatre Monday. It is a picture which every person interested in the institution of marriage—and what adolescent or adult person is not?—should make it a point to see. It clears up, through the telling of a powerful, human and very dramatic story, the theory of companionate marriage, as a remedy for matrimonial ills, advanced by the noted judge of Denver's Juvenile Court, Judge Ben B. Lindsey, in his much-discussed book, "The Companionate Marriage." It contrasts a happy "companionate marriage" with two very wretched marriages occurring under the present laws regarding matrimony.

The picture is a forceful denunciation of present-day matrimony as well as a defence of the companionate variety, told vividly and dramatically in a very human, believable story, through a group of actions that reach brilliancy in the performance of their roles. "Companionate Marriage" is a picture that everyone should see, the unhappily married as well as those who have found happiness, companionship and love in the partnership of marriage.

AN EXCITING PICTURE

Do not get the idea that "Companionate Marriage" is merely a preachment, for it is nothing of the sort; the preachment, such as there is, is inherent in the story which measures up in interest, excitement and entertainment to the best that recent motion pictures have afforded. The producers, assisted by Judge Lindsey who helped prepare the scenario and was constantly on the set during the filming of the production, set out first of all to make a picture that would interest, entertain and amuse the public; the instruction which it affords is inherent in the colorful and exciting story. See "Companionate Marriage" and you will know exactly what Judge Lindsey's new theory of marriage is and you will be entertained at the same time and terrifically moved unless you are beyond the appeal of a human story dramatically told.

POLICE PROBE THEFT OF DEER FROM SHED

Police Wednesday morning were asked to investigate the theft of a deer, weighing 140 pounds, from the shed of William Diedrich on Seymour-st. The animal was stolen between 12:45 and 5 o'clock Wednesday morning, according to Joseph Elsch, who shot the animal. Mr. Elsch and a party of hunters returned from the north last week with two bucks, one weighing 230 pounds and the other 140 pounds. The animals were placed in Diedrich's shed. The thieves did not molest the larger animal.

CONSIDER PLANS FOR CEREMONY IN HONOR OF AIRMAIL

Chamber of Commerce Directors May Hold Program to Inaugurate Service

Possibility of having Neenah-Menasha listed as an air mail stop, suggestions for a ceremony to inaugurate the airmail line through Appleton from Green Bay to Milwaukee, and promotion of use of the air mail will be discussed by the chamber of commerce air mail committee Wednesday afternoon. The meeting has been called for 4:30 at chamber offices.

Although the government has twice refused to place the twin cities on the route, the committee still believes it possible to make the postal department reverse its decision. They point out that mail from the two cities probably will be heavier than from Appleton.

Whether there will be a ceremony of any kind on inauguration of the service is a question. It has been pointed out the mail plane probably will land here, pick up its cargo and then depart to keep on schedule. If that is the case any kind of a ceremony or public reception will be out of the question.

FOUR MAIL CARRIERS CONFINED TO HOMES

Four of the regular mail carriers of the Appleton postal department are confined to their homes with illness and four sub-carriers have been called in on duty. Inasmuch as there are only five carriers for the 19 city routes, some of the carriers must sort the mail for more than one route and therefore there is some delay in handling of mail deliveries, according to F. F. Wettengel, acting postmaster.

This same condition is prevalent in many offices in the United States, Mr. Wettengel said, and is an additional reason why postal patrons should consider the mailmen by doing their Christmas shopping and mailing as early as possible. He pointed out that by mailing early the last minute rush, which probably will swamp crippled offices, would be prevented.

After spending more than a week near Tomahawk Lake, August Zimmer, Appleton, returned home Tuesday afternoon from their deer hunting trip. Each hunter shot a good sized buck.

How To Play Bridge

BY MILTON C. WORK

We give today Deal Q and Question No. 23 of the current series of twenty-five questions.

Contract No. Trump, South Declarer.

To Trick 1, West leads the Four of Spades, Dummy plays the Six, East the Queen, and South wins with the King.

QUESTION NO. 23. Which card should South lead to trick 2, and which card should be played from Dummy?

(Fill the blank before you read the answer that follows.)

ANSWER BLANK

23. To trick 2, South should lead _____ and Dummy should play _____

THE ANSWER

23. To trick 2, South should lead the Seven of Diamonds and Dummy should play the Ace.

This play is advisable upon the assumption that West led from a suit of more than four cards. If so, and the adversaries obtain the lead, they will take (in addition to the trick with which they got in) at least four spades and save game. To make same, if that be the Spade distribution, Declarer must run nine tricks before the adversaries obtain the lead. He is assured, in addition to the one Spade already taken, of three Hearts and his two Minor Aces—three short of the necessary number.

Of course he could make an extra heart trick if the six adverse Hearts were divided 3-3, but that is not probable. He also could make an extra Diamond trick by finessing if the King of Diamonds were held by West—but even if successful, the finesse could not be repeated; and would be an unnecessary risk because game would be lost if West held the King.

Declarer has an even chance for game by trying the Club finesse; to try it, Dummy must be placed in the lead by taking the second trick with the Ace of Diamonds, and leading the Jack of Clubs to trick 3, intending to play the Ten of Clubs from Closed Hand if East do not cover with the King.

National League Head Considers Ten-Man Baseball Teams

PINCH HITTER MAY TAKE HURLER'S PLACE ON BATTING ORDER

Plan Will Be Taken to American League Meeting Thursday

By HERBERT W. BARKER
Associated Press Staff Writer
New York.—(AP)—National league officials are in favor of 10-man baseball teams and pitchers who are just that and nothing more. What's more they will take their plan with them to Chicago for consideration at the joint meeting with the American league Thursday.

John A. Heydler, just reelected as president of the National league for four more years, suggested a radical change in the rules whereby weak-hitting pitchers would have somebody else to do their batting and base-running for them. While his club owners inclined a favorable ear, Mr. Heydler explained that he felt the rule change would speed up baseball and at the same time, obviate the necessity of having so many pinch hitters.

Said Mr. Heydler: "With a few exceptions practically all pitchers are weak hitters and weaker base runners. When they come to bat they literally put a drag on the game. No one expects them to do anything and they simply suspend the action of the play."

"Now it is my idea that this could be eliminated with the adoption of a rule permitting a pinch hitter to do the batting for the pitcher each time the pitcher's regular time at bat came around without forcing the removal of the pitcher from the game. This, of course, is only a suggestion and there doubtless are several details which would have to be worked out later. For one, I think it would be best if the same pinch hitter did all the batting for one pitcher and that this batter be designated by the manager before game-time."

"With the adoption of this rule we would do away with the necessity of sending a pitcher removed who was pitching very well but had to make way for a pinch hitter because his team is in need of a run. It certainly would increase the action of the game and eliminate much of the delay caused by the changing of pitchers. During the past season in the National league pitchers were removed for pinch hitters about 600 times and in most cases they were taken out not because they were pitching poorly but because their turn at bat came at a critical moment when a good hitter was needed."

Mr. Heydler pointed out that the rule need not be compulsory so that good-hitting pitchers could be permitted to take their regular time at bat if managers so desired.

Provided the suggestion meets with American league favor it is probable that a special meeting of the league committee would be called in time to place the suggested change in effect before the 1929 season starts.

The officials may look with favor upon the plan but it scarcely likely that the pitchers themselves will do very much loud cheering over it. Under modern heavy artillery conditions, pitchers usually are confronted with eight good batsmen anyway without making it worse by adding another. The sight of a rival pitcher coming to the plate gives batters one of their few opportunities for rejoicing.

Mr. Heydler's radical suggestion was the spice of an otherwise routine meeting of the National league.

After re-electing Mr. Heydler for four years at an increase in salary, the magnates heard that National league attendance in 1928 was around 5,000,000 a decrease of 400,000 over the previous year, that Philadelphia, Boston, Pittsburgh and Chicago showed losses and New York, Brooklyn, Cincinnati and St. Louis gains in attendance; that 4,278 dozen baseballs were used, less than the previous season; discussed the advisability of closing the 1929 season on Oct. 6, rather than the tentative date on Sept. 29; formally awarded the 1928 pennant to St. Louis; decided that pitchers will be forced to use a white ball; umpires "behind ordered" not to rub the ball in; voted to continue the "most valuable player" award although discussing possible changes in the method of making the selection; selected a new board of directors under the rotation system; and decided that hereafter balls hit outside the park whether into bleachers or not will be adjudged fair or foul at the spot that they leave the field.

Every time a ball hit outside the park not into a stand, was ruled fair or foul according to where it was last seen by the umpire. The "white ball" rule was ordered because of a promise by manufacturers that hereafter the balls will be made without gloss. Umpires have rubbed the ball in the soil to remove this gloss in the past.

MUCH ADO ABOUT SEVERAL THINGS BY G.R. McINTYRE

The decision of the Big Ten athletic conference last week to refuse to play any school which does not enforce the freshman eligibility rule except Army (and it is implied Navy, too) means that West Point finally has won its argument about allowing plebs to take part in intercollegiate sports if they are good enough. The army's fight has been long and hard with practically everything, including public opinion against them.

Most fans perhaps don't realize why the soldiers fought so hard for the privilege of playing yearlings. It wasn't because they need fresh men athletes, especially if they happen to be former college grid stars, but because they place every man on an equal basis, rich man, poor man or athlete, and he is credited for what he accomplishes in his four years at the Point, not for what he did before he came up the river. That's the principle the army's been fighting for and the one they won.

Some time ago we talked with Lieutenant Stewart J. Mills, a graduate of Appleton High school and of West Point last June. We met Mills shortly after the final break between the Army and Navy and of course talk turned to that particular subject. Naturally he stuck with the army on the question and was emphatic in the declaration that when a man enters the Point he's what he is at the moment and what he can make of himself, not what he was before taking the trip up the Hudson.

Tuesday morning's mail brought a letter from the colonel commanding the Third regiment at Fort Snelling, Minn., on the question of the Point's eligibility stand. It was pointed out, of course, but after having talked with Mills and having learned his side of the question, a man to man, the communication

FEW BIG TEN SCHOOLS WIN PRE-SEASON GAMES

Chicago.—(AP)—Big Ten basketball teams have come through their initial games of the season against ordinarily second caliber teams with a low percentage of .600 per cent.

It has been the poorest start for the conference cage teams in years.

Michigan, Minnesota, Ohio State and Indiana all were defeated in their first games, while Illinois, Wisconsin, Chicago, Northwestern, Iowa and Purdue were victorious. Purdue, which tied for the championship last season with Indiana, showed impressive form Tuesday night by toppling its first opponent, Wabash, 44 to 22.

True, no matter how resourceful and brainy a big league manager may be, he cannot make his team win unless he has the material to work with, good pitching and a punch at the bat. As a matter of fact, when a team is winning, the public may or may not track of the important part played by the manager. But when it is losing, gossip is quick to say there is no harmony on the club, that the team lacks discipline and the players a proper respect for their leader.

In all baseball history I doubt if there ever was a more striking example of how a really great team can overshadow the work of the manager than the case of the New York Yankees and Miller Huggins. Over a decade spent in the major leagues I regard Miller Huggins as one of the greatest managers I have ever met. Yet because he presides over a club that is heavy with outstanding stars, Huggins has never received the credit due him.

It isn't the easiest task in the world to manage a club that has as many truly great stars as the Yankees. Ball players are temperamental, live in a world of their own and the leader of a club containing many outstanding players has his work cut out for him to keep peace in the family. The Yankees are a club made up of stars; yet I have seen few teams where a better spirit existed. The credit for that must go to Miller Huggins and take it from me that is some form of credit. In a quiet, unassuming manner, Huggins bosses the Yankees with a friendly but firm hand. He is broadminded about all things, has no set rules that must be observed to the letter, but the player, who tries to make a "sucker" out of the mite manager quickly finds that he is waging a losing contest. Huggins may tolerate him for a time but sooner or later he suddenly passes from the Yankees.

Huggins makes mighty few mistakes in matters of judgment. He is a manager of definite opinions, has the courage of his convictions. In all my experience with him, I have never once heard him offer an alibi for the failure of his strategy to go over. He can smile in victory and likewise take a "licking" without doing any weeping.

Incidentally there is nothing of the grandstand about Huggins. He doesn't go back in the limelight because of the great success the Yankees under his direction have had in recent years. When Huggins was trying to build up the club, in the days when his team was anything but a pennant contender, he was always on the coaching lines, fighting every inch of the way. In those days, he was the butt of much criticism from the fans because of the failure of the Yankees to win.

Once the Yankees struck their stride and began winning pennants and world series, Huggins deserted the coaching lines for the bench. In failure he was game enough to take all the criticism for the team's failure, in victory he was content to conceal his identity on the bench and let his players have all the glory.

Unquestionably Miller Huggins is one of the game's greatest managers, yet his ability as a leader is dwarfed because of the many outstanding players on his club. However, the modest Huggins is content that it should be that way, and it is the way he wants it to be.

During the first few minutes of play G. Pigeon caged two baskets. George Busch was fouled but missed the free throw. Mongin scored and Green Bay took time out. Then Joseph Gossens started. Doug Courchane passed to him, he took a long shot and made it. Dud was fouled on but missed the shot. Courchane tried for a field goal but missed. Gossens picked up the ball and made the basket. No points were made by either team until the end of the quarter when Dud Courchane fouled E. Pigeon, and he made the free throw leaving the score 7-4 in Green Bay's favor.

During the first part of the second quarter many shots were taken but none made and the half ended 16-12 in Green Bay's favor.

In the second half Gossens starred with his shooting. He scored one. Busch caged another. Dud Courchane scored. Gossens passed to Gandy who caged another for Kimberly. Dud passed to Gossens and he made another Desdiche ended the game by making a basket for Green Bay and leaving the score 35-25 in Kimberly's favor.

In the preliminary the second team was defeated 16-12 by the Kaukauna "25" club.

Give Huggins Credit For Showing Of Yanks--Evans

BY BILLY EVANS

THE business of managing a big league club has a peculiar proposition. Usually when a club is a consistent winner, most of the credit is showered on the athletes. When a club fails to win, the blame is invariably attached to the manager.

True, no matter how resourceful and brainy a big league manager may be, he cannot make his team win unless he has the material to work with, good pitching and a punch at the bat. PAZELLA EASILY DEFEATS HILL IN WRESTLING BOUT

Gets First Fall in 44 Minutes and Second About Five Minutes Later

Karl Pazella, 185 pounds, annexed another title at the armory Tuesday night when he threw George Hill, 237 pounds, of Chicago, two straight falls, the first in 44 minutes and the second in about five minutes. About 500 people witnessed the bout and were so enthusiastic that Promoter Tony Tamasun, who is also Pazello's manager, probably will put on more matches here in the near future.

The Lithuanian clearly outclassed Hill, who is recognized as the heavy-weight champion of Wisconsin. He easily broke all holds that Hill managed to get and he had Hill in trouble various times throughout the early minutes of the bout. Pazello recently won the light heavy-weight championship of the world and he now is setting out after the heavy-weight title.

Hill had been offered $500 if he won this match with Pazello—with nothing for a defeat. The crowd booed and hissed at Hill several times, especially when the referee, Henry C. Nagler of Oshkosh, warned him not to use the rabbit punch. Most of Hill's work was done with a headlock which he didn't seem to have strength enough to hold the smaller man to. Pazello, quick and slippery, squirmed away from Hill every time the latter got a hold and then rushed over his head on several occasions.

Although he was outwrestled, 37 pounds Pazello easily handled the big man. The first fall came after Pazello picked up Hill bodily, whirled him in an airplane hold and then pinned him to the mat. The second fall came only a short time after the match was resumed.

Hans Hall of Oshkosh, 135 pounds, defeated Siphery Milan of Fisk, 133 pounds, after the former won the first fall in four minutes with a top body hold. Hall then won the second fall in three minutes with a body scissors and the third fall in six minutes with a spinning hold.

Earl Otto, 165 pounds, Appleton, defeated Lumberjack Peterson, 162 pounds, Shawano with one fall in 24 minutes, using a head lock. Jack Jackson, of Ripon, 144 pounds defeated Henry Pahl of Oshkosh, 148 pounds, in one fall in nine minutes with a toehold.

Neenah Coach Has Tough Job With Squad This Year

Won Title Last Season and Now Must Try to Repeat

(This is the first of a series of articles on the basketball situation in high schools near Appleton. One article will appear each day until all the larger high schools near here have been covered.)

BY G. R. McINTYRE
NEENAH.—The toughest job in the world, that's the one confronting Coach Ole Jorgenson of Neenah as he sends his 1928-29 basketball squad through its daily paces. Last year Jorgenson had a team of six footers that would do any coach's heart a world of good. He had a rare scoring combination, a great center, and two guards as reliable as could be found. With this combination the Neenah quint romped through victories over Appleton high school, they waded through the Northeastern Wisconsin basketball conference and to a title, and then they copped the district tournament showing as a team that ranked second to none.

The came the state tournament at Madison and despite a hard season the youngsters under Jorgenson's tutelage played through the best teams in the state and copped third place, a defeat by Madison Central stopping their title quest. And to top matters several of Jorgenson's men received mention for all-state positions.

And now Jorgenson must coach a repeater, the toughest assignment in the sport world, and one which goes against the old age axiom, that they never repeat, at least not two years straight running.

There are a half dozen reasons why leaders don't repeat in sports and the foremost two are staring the Neenah coach in the face. One is that the Neenah highs have nothing to shoot at, they won a championship and the thrill is gone from that particular trick; they've entered district tournaments until it's almost monotonous, and they've also entered state meets.

But the greatest reason teams seldom repeat is that the great combinations of a championship season don't often continue through to another season. And that's what has wrecked the Neenah team.

Jorgenson's great scoring combination was broken when Haase and Radke were lost through graduation and until Schneller, center, recovers from a recent illness the Neenahites won't even have a resemblance of the team that carried through to almost a state title.

When the team takes the field against Appleton highs Thursday evening in the S. A. Cook armory, only two of last season's five will be on the floor. Johnson and Ehler guards. True the two forwards, Gaertner and Thermanson were members of the 1928 squad but they weren't the scorers the other two men were.

So it's for that reason that Coach Jorgenson doesn't wax enthusiastic as he looks over his prospects for this season, especially his early season games. If he could say Schneller will be at center for this or that game perhaps he'd feel better. But just now that's impossible.

Neenah's conference caging schedule does not start until late this month and the coach is hoping that by that time Schneller will again be able to cavort on the gym floor. As he looks forward to that time he's optimistic, but regardless, it looks as though his work is all out for him.

DID YOU KNOW THAT—OM HEENEY spent Thanks-giving in the country and got sick... Charley Harvey saw him, sent him to the hospital... And the verdict was pneumonia. One of the big eastern writers wanted to put Haycraft of Minnesota on his All-America... The westerners argued Tanner was the boy he meant... And he couldn't see their point of view. The boys who picked Hoffman for All-America did it on his game with Army... Before the game Pacific coast writers said Simkins was a better fullback. Fielesbacker could have gone home in his dad's private car after the game, but preferred to travel with the boys... They say money doesn't affect him in the least... He's not a bit high-hat... And one of the most popular men on the team. It's all the bunk about Hoffman going to marry Mary Brian... he's engaged to a rich girl out there.

JUST A LITTLE ERROR CONSIDERING that the burdens of their office are heavy and many, the baseball magnates may be forgiven if their memories don't function at times. In the stress of excitement and political turmoil the magnates do forget seriously in occasion and some of the owners of the International League teams did some serious forgetting recently.

It seems there was a faction among them that desired the removal of John Conway Toole as the president. Before his sudden death Jack Dunn, owner of the Baltimore, said there wasn't room enough in the league for himself and Toole. Dunn was powerful in league politics and it looked like the end of Toole.

The campaign against Toole was continued after Dunn's death, and some major league owners bowed in, as they never had been fond of Toole's violent opposition to the draft.

When the owners gathered in Toronto during the annual meeting of the minor leagues, the newspapermen were told that the battle was on for Toole's removal and that he would be removed. But he wasn't removed.

TOOLE SAID PLENTY Toole had his little say when the proper time came, and he said something like this in his best legal fashion: "Since I am to remain as the president of the International League for two more years, it seems to me to be the practical thing to decide upon our future poties and ignore some trivialities that have been discussed informally in recent weeks.

"It should not be necessary to call your attention to it, but it must be that some of you gentlemen have forgotten that, at the annual meeting of the league last winter, you kindly ordered me a three year contract with a generous increase in salary, and I am happy that I am able to serve out the contract. We will now proceed with important business."

It was the custom of Ban Johnson, when he was president of the American League and caught his magnates in a forgetful mood, to give them a good frying. Ban usually emerged from the situation with a vote of confidence and a big kick in salary.

KIMBERLY QUINTET WINS FROM BAY TEAM

Second Squad Loses to Kaukauna "25" Club in Close Game 16 and 12

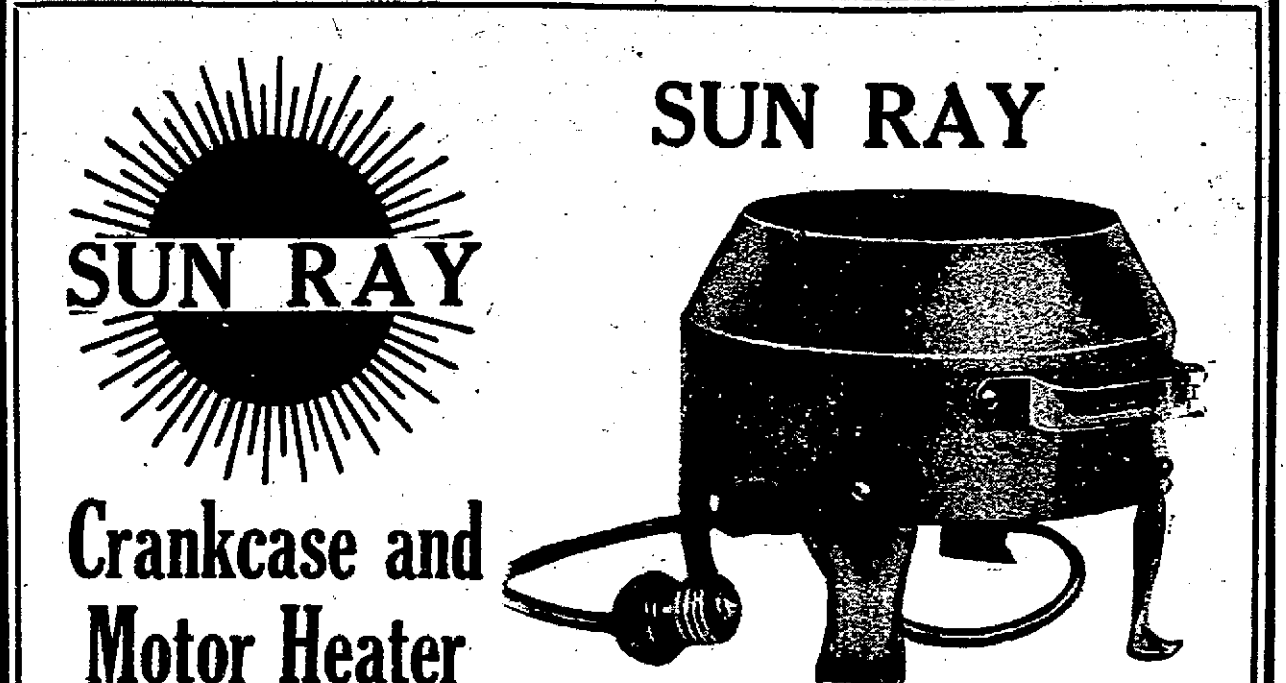

Kimberly.—In spite of the fact that Pete Koll, star forward, was unable to play on account of illness and Dewey Williams, guard, is laid up with an injured leg, the Kimberly Club five, who played the Green Bay Club five here Tuesday night 35-25. Joseph Gossens and Fred Gunderson, who played their first game with the Club, proved that they are capable of holding their positions. Gossens scored 13 of the Papermaker's points and Gundy 5. Bush, Du Chaine, and Courchane also deserve credit for the way they filled their positions. For Green Bay Desdiche with four baskets and a field goal, was high scorer. G. Pigeon made four baskets, Mongin three, E. Pigeon one and a free throw.

During the first few minutes of play G. Pigeon caged two baskets. George Busch was fouled but missed the free throw. Mongin scored and Green Bay took time out. Then Joseph Gossens started. Doug Courchane passed to him, he took a long shot and made it. Dud was fouled on but missed the shot. Courchane tried for a field goal but missed. Gossens picked up the ball and made the basket. No points were made by either team until the end of the quarter when Dud Courchane fouled E. Pigeon, and he made the free throw leaving the score 7-4 in Green Bay's favor.

During the first part of the second quarter many shots were taken but none made and the half ended 16-12 in Green Bay's favor.

In the second half Gossens starred with his shooting. He scored one. Busch caged another. Dud Courchane scored. Gossens passed to Gandy who caged another for Kimberly. Dud passed to Gossens and he made another Desdiche ended the game by making a basket for Green Bay and leaving the score 35-25 in Kimberly's favor.

In the preliminary the second team was defeated 16-12 by the Kaukauna "25" club.

TRADES BREWING IN AMERICAN LEAGUE

Support Continuance of American Legion Junior Tournament

BY PAUL R. MICKELSON
Associated Press Sports Writer
Chicago — (AP) — The American league player market is still bullish, but the bears preserved with great expectancy for the big break in prices as junior circuit officials and club owners went into a huddle again Wednesday.

Several deals for trades and outright sales of playing talent, which were blocked by high prices and high demands Tuesday, were expected to be consummated. The trading movement overshadowed in importance the business meeting of the officials at which nothing but routine matters were listed for secret discussion.

Only two deals were made after a score of conferences among managers Tuesday. One swapped George Uhle, Cleveland pitcher, to Detroit in exchange for shortstop Jack Tavenner and pitcher Ken Kolloway; the other was the outright sale of first baseman Johnny Neun by Detroit to the Toledo club of the American association.

While the various club managers still persisted in demands for full value for every trade or sale, more than a score of players were known to be in the market. Among the rumored deals were those that would shift Buddy Myer from the Boston Red Sox to Washington for five players and catcher Moe Berg and outfielder Bill Barrett of the White Sox to Boston or the Yankees in exchange for talent.

Every manager and club owner had one or more deals on the fire.

Everything of interest to come up before the junior circuit officials and owners, such as action in the demand by the minors that the majors sell their "farms" and the much tossed about draft question, was expected to be held over for the joint meeting with the National league Thursday.

It is likely the American league will follow the senior circuit and refuse to send delegates to the West End, Ind., conference at which the minors hope to settle the draft problem.

American league owners Tuesday voted to continue support of the American Legion junior baseball championship program and favored a five-year program of subsidizing $5,000 annually to the National Association of Professional Baseball Players. The National league must act favorably on the latter proposal before it is put into action.

Kimberly-Clark Aggregation Overcomes Lead to Cop Victory

Showing a smooth, driving attack, members of the Neenah Kimberly-Clark company team triumphed over the Citizen National bank team Tuesday evening in the Y. M. C. A. Industrial basketball league. The score was 28 to 20.

The Bankers ended the first half with an 8-5 lead thanks to their ability to count on Papermakers' fouls. They scored two baskets and four free throws during the period while the Neenah five counted two baskets and two gift shots.

In the second half the Neenah team stepped out and with most every man on the squad counting at least two baskets tied the score and then crashed through to a victory. Carl Voelck, former Lawrence college player tried to keep his team in the running with a pair of field goals but with his mates being held down accomplished little.

PRICE OF COAL, COKE IS RISING

Little Difficulty Is Experienced in Getting Shipments from Lake Cities

Coal and coke prices have advanced considerably during the past month and the present retail price is none too steady, according to local fuel dealers. Traction company coke is now selling at $11.50 a ton, $2.50 more than it was retailing at two months ago. Coke is being used by a great number of local fuel users this winter.

Prices on Pocahontas have advanced 50 cents a ton during the past month. Shovel Pocahontas is retailing at $13 a ton and the forked grade at $15 a ton. A discount for cash is being offered by local dealers. Hard coal also advanced 50 cents a ton during the past few weeks and is now retailing at $19 a ton.

Local dealers are being kept busy filling orders which were placed during the summer and fall months. Very little difficulty has been experienced this year in receiving shipments from coal docks at Green Bay, Manitowish and other nearby ports, dealers say.

DEER HUNTERS WILL BE WARY WHEN THEY COME TO APPLETON

Appleton evidently harbors some of the meanest persons on earth—that at least is what two deer hunters staying at a local hotel Saturday and Sunday night think. One had the misfortune of having the hind quarter of his deer sawed from the carcass, and another lost his animal by theft.

An unidentified hunter who stayed at the hotel Saturday had his deer tied to the rear end of the car between the rumble seat and the spare tire. Some time during the early part of Saturday evening someone with a saw sliced the right hind quarter from the animal. The proud owner appeared on the scene about 8 o'clock to show the animal to several of his friends, and found the mangled carcass.

Monday another hunter staying at the hotel reported that someone had stolen a 125 pound poim buck from his machine parked on N. Appleton-st Sunday night.

SEEK HOSPITAL FOR YOUNG CRIPPLES

250-bed Institution Will Be Asked of 1929 State Legislature

Madison—(AP)—A 250-bed hospital for Wisconsin's crippled children, to operate in conjunction with Wisconsin General Hospital here, will be asked of the 1929 state legislature.

Miss Marguerite Lison, executive secretary for the Wisconsin Association for the Disabled, with offices in the state Capitol here, is leading a drive by the Association for the new hospital, along with officers of the organization and members of civic and fraternal clubs of the state.

Following an intensive study of the needs of crippled children in eight counties (Langlade, Marinette, Fond du Lac, Kenosha, Dane, Door, Kewaunee and Sheboygan) in which 865 cases were found, the association exterminated, from a ratio system that there must be about 8,000 crippled children in the state. Of these 2,500 are expected to be in such condition that immediate operative or other remedial care would straighten their crooked limbs, unshackle their halting feet or improve their bent little bodies in the proper way.

The first conception was to ask the state University, of which the Wisconsin General Hospital is part, to include the sum, as yet unannounced, for a hospital in its budget for 1929-31.

Then, because the University regents were recognized as already burdened in their needful requests for academic financing alone, it was decided that the association and affiliated organizations would ask for the hospital directly.

It was found that only 33 per cent of the young cripples have had opportunity for an examination by a specialist in crippled children's work; that of those who had this opportunity only 45 per cent had followed the recommendations.

"As a means of providing this opportunity to crippled children living far from hospital centers, specialists were brought to these counties and a general orthopedic was held," said Miss Lison today.

"It was found that for forty per cent of the crippled children definite recommendations were made for operative treatment. None of these counties was part of those that suffered from the epidemic three years ago in which 300 infantile cases were found in five western counties.

HONOR GUN BANNER IS RECEIVED BY GUARD

Officers of Co. D, 127th Infantry, Wisconsin National Guard, have received the 64th brigade banner the company won last summer at Camp Williams for machine gun combat honors. The regimental banner was received before the company left camp. The new banner credits the company with being the best machine company in the entire brigade, composed of the 127th and 128th Infantry regiments. Pictures of the winning squads and the banner were taken at drill Monday evening.

THIS HAS HAPPENED

SYBIL RHORNE, whose husband was killed on the day her divorce came to trial, has had a most dramatic meeting with an old sweetheart. JOHN LAWRENCE, whom she believed dead makes a most unexpected appearance. Ten years ago John and Sybil were engaged. He was sent to France on the eve of their marriage and was later reported as killed in action. Now it develops that he has been a victim of amnesia. When he saw Sybil, he became unconscious and upon being revived, remembered all the past that had been a blank for 10 years.

He tells Sybil that he is about to be married, but asks her if she still loves him. Then he takes her in his arms and kisses her wildly. MABEL MOORE enters the room unexpectedly. Because of their long friendship, Mabel dares to remonstrate with Sybil and begs her not to renew her romance with John. She tells Sybil all she knows of him—that his life has been simply one woman after another. And she honestly believes it is impossible for two people, who have changed as great a deal, to continue a romance that once was young and sweet.

Sybil resents Mabel's interference and declares that she means to call on John Lawrence at his apartment that evening. Then she takes her child, TEDDY, and departs, still smarting under Mabel's admonitions. John Lawrence, during the long years of hospitalization, had become a favorite with a kind congressman who took an interest in him and obtained a position for him. It was she who chose the name for him he had borne since he lost his own ROGER CALDWELL. As Roger Caldwell, he has won the heart of KITTY BURNS.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER LXV
Kitty Burns was a stenographer in the office of the Allied Shoe Machinery company. The girls all thought she looked like Clara Bow, with her big, brown eyes that flashed and rolled like a first-class movie vamp.

Frivolity was a sort of veneer with Kitty. Beneath her raspberry rouge, she was sweet and guileless as a little plaster saint.

One morning, Roger Caldwell, dropping in, leaned over Kitty's desk and asked if he might see her that evening. For six weeks that same young man had been Kitty's "intention" and to win his notice she had prayed that God might make him look her way.

It was a very quiet little romance. Roger had been baptized and confirmed and taken the pledge, before Kitty accepted the dazzling solitaire he chose. Then she gave her a miscellaneous shower and a mahogany butterfly table. The banns were published and Roger bought the wedding ring.

The wonder of the thing never dimmed.

"Oh, why," they asked each other, "why did YOU ever love ME?"

It was seven o'clock and Kitty in her little room at the Franklin Square House was getting worried.

"Are you SURE, girls, there wasn't a message before I came in?"

"For heaven's sake! NO! How many more times are you going to ask? He's gone back on you, Kitty."

"He's too handsome to be true!"

"Poor Kitty!"

But she laughed at their humor.

"There's the phone now! What do you bet it's not for me?"

She reached down the hall and they heard her before the booth door closed: "Hello, dear, dear. You can't? Oh, that's too bad. No, I don't care—not really. It doesn't make a bit of difference."

"You're a sweet child," the voice at the other end was saying. "I wish to the Lord this other thing hadn't come up, but I can't get out of it very well. And we'll see Harold Lloyd tomorrow night..."

As a business woman Kitty Burns prided herself on being reasonable.

"Of course, I understand," she told him. "Anyhow, I've a million things to do."

"I love you, Catherine Agnes," he interrupted solemnly.

Kitty hated the name she had taken in confirmation. The sisters made her do it, because Agnes was her patron saint. But now she ignored Roger's teasing.

"Me, too," she told him.

It was their little signal. If there was no one near, Kitty would whisper over the wires each night: "I love you, sweetheart." But if there were girls in the corridor, waiting for the booth, then Kitty, when Roger repeated the holy ritual of lovers, would reply so that he might know there were listeners about and the conversation was shortly concluded.

"Phone me in the morning?"

"You bet. Good night, Kitty-girl."

He hung up the receiver wearily and sat dejectedly on the bed, staring blankly.

"Oh, God, what a mess!"

Kitty's fiancé had succeeded remarkably in a business way. The girls agreed that Kitty had done pretty well by herself.

"Now if you can only hold him," they told her, and warned her out of their hard young wisdom. "The more he has known of the many, the less he will settle to one."

For Caldwell had been as notoriously successful with women as with real estate.

The suite he occupied at the Fairmore was indicative of his monetary achievements. Sybil would be impressed by the luxury of his surroundings.

A small glow of satisfaction intruded upon his misery. Better that she found him this way than a broken wreck of a thing in that hospital in Washington. He didn't want her pity—not by a darn sight. He hoped she wouldn't think she had to resurrect their romance. Now, if Kitty...

He ground his heel into the softness of an Oriental rug, and paced restlessly about. Sybil was wonderful—no doubt about it. He remembered now every detail of their youthful passion. The way she lifted her lips to his. The way her soft arms crept about his khaki shoulders until her fingers clasped behind his neck, and she drew his face to hers.

The agony of their parting—and the way she cried. God bless her darling heart! They'd wanted so fearfully to be married. What a different story life would have been! No use philosophizing about that!

Different, too, if they had found each other six months ago. Now there was Kitty; gentle little Kitty. He was the luckiest fellow in the world to have her. Sweet, innocent.

Sybil was different. She'd been through the mill. A married woman now, with a baby. Somehow, beside Kitty, Sybil looked hard and a little weary. Freshness was something to worship. There was a bit of the spiritual in Kitty's untouched charm. It set her apart from all the other jaded little girls.

The discordant note of the telephone interrupted his meditations.

"Hello!—oh, hello, Sybil. I'll be right down."

She was sitting in a big chair in the foyer, one slim knee thrown over the other, and a dainty foot swinging nervously. Pale with the sophisticated pallor smart women affect, with lips painted vividly. Her costume was smartly black, relieved by pearls about her throat and in her ears.

"John!" She rose to meet him, extending her hand.

"Sybil! My dear!"

The little girl for whom his heart had ached in throes of crucifying tenderness. The darling child who brought him fudge at Deven's, and knit the socks that didn't fit. The weeping angel who cried on his shoulder, and blew her little nose on a rooky's cotton handkerchief, breaking her heart with grief because she loved him so.

How she had changed—this charming sophisticate! This pale, evile creature, with hands as cold as ice, and eyes like liquid pools of wisdom.

He took her arm as they walked toward the elevator, and felt her tremble. When they reached the rooms she exclaimed delightedly at the open fire, and chafed her hands before its blaze.

"I was too excited for dinner," she explained. "Couldn't you have some coffee sent up? I'm simply frozen."

He accepted the suggestion eagerly, supplementing it with hors d'oeuvres and chicken. In a chafing dish.

"The very thing," he insisted, "for a cold night."

While they waited they sat in constrained silence, making conversation with effort that was almost ludicrous. Until finally Sybil shattered the polite discourse.

"Ten years," she cried, "and we were lovers!"

She leaned toward him, and she was very lovely in the freelight. She looked younger with her hat off, and more girlish now that her face was flushed.

"And we're talking like a couple of

NEW MACHINE WILL SET TYPE EITHER BY WIRE OR RADIO

Invention Brings Another Revolutionizing Influence to Printing

Rochester, N. Y. — The invention of the Teletypesetter—a machine that will set type by telegraph or radio—just announced by Frank E. Gannett, newspaper publisher, and Walter W. Morey of East Orange, N. J., brings to the history of printing one more great revolutionizing influence.

The new device combines two of the most amazing inventions in the newspaper trade—the linotype machine and the teletype, or telegraph-typeprinter.

The linotype machine, as everybody knows, is a machine that sets type in solid metal slugs of one line each. Its invention did away with the old method of setting type by hand, which had existed since the days of Gutenberg and made possible the rapid printing of the modern big city newspaper. The teletype, by which an operator in one city can work a typewriter in a city across the continent, is beginning to replace the old-style telegraph instrument in newspaper offices, bringing greater speed and accuracy to the transmission of news.

USES PERFORATED TAPE

This new invention—the Teletypesetter—combines these two devices. The operator of the sending apparatus has a news story before him. He copies it off on his machine, which has a keyboard like that of a typewriter. This perforates a tape, and the perforations govern the electrical impulses which are transmitted to the receiving set in a distant city.

On the receiving set is another tape, which receives perforations identical with those on the tape of the sending set. This tape is fed through an apparatus which is connected with the linotype machine, and the impulses received through the perforations in the tape depress the proper keys on the machine and cast the type in the desired manner. For the convenience of the editor, a typewriter record is made simultaneously, and there is an editing perforator which permits him to make such changes in the copy as he sees fit.

By using this device, it will be possible for an operator in New York City, for instance, to set type simultaneously in the composing rooms of a dozen different newspapers, scattered all the way from Chicago to Seattle. The great saving in time and labor is obvious.

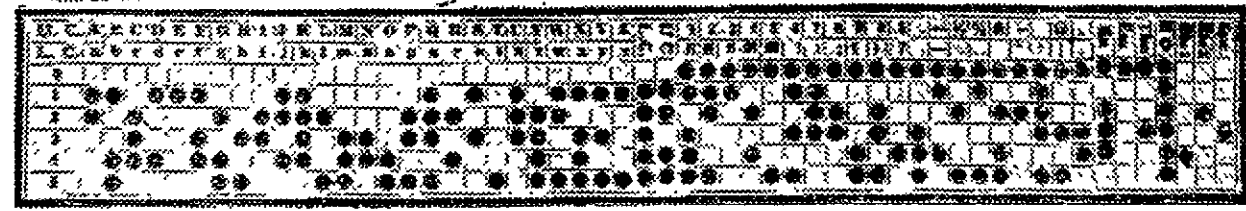

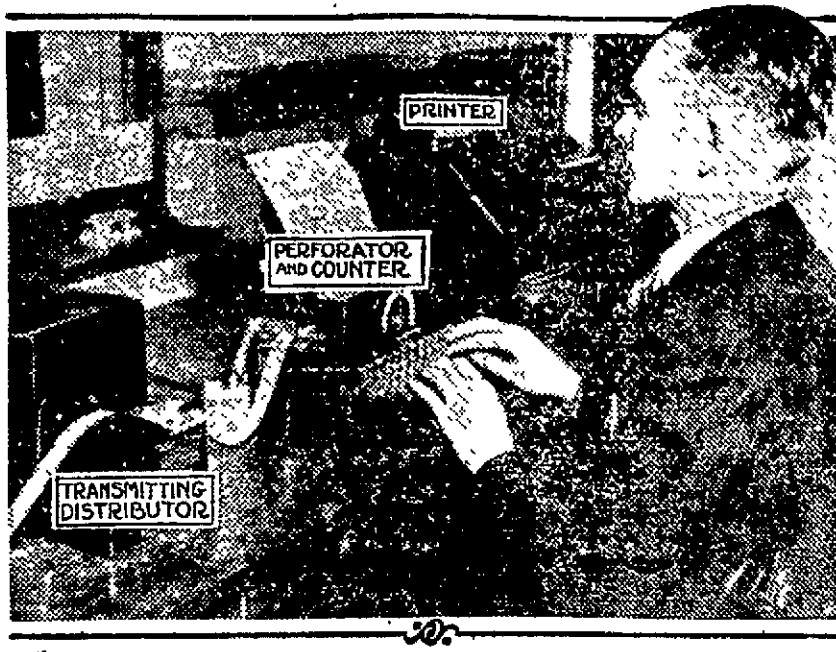

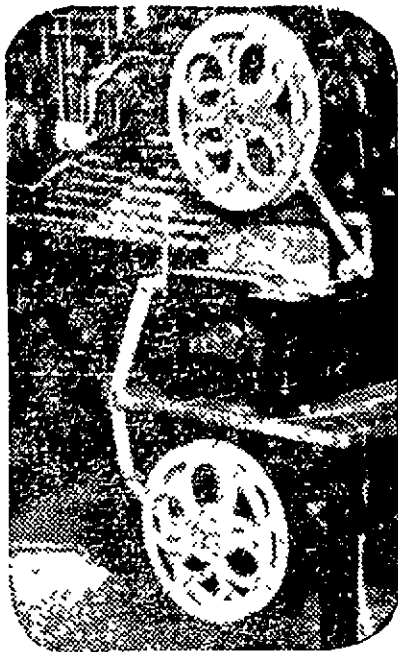

HISTORY OF PRINTING

The whole history of printing has been a story of new inventions, each making the process of putting words on papers less slow and laborious. The Chinese had devised movable types by as early as 925 A. D., but the absence of an alphabet hampered them and prevented their art of printing from having any real influence on the art in the western world. In Europe, all writings were written down on parchment by hand, although initial letters, pictures and the like were carved on blocks and stamped on the paper.

It was in 1438 that Gutenberg began printing with movable type, and ten years later he established a shop at Mainz, Germany. In 1462 Mainz was sacked by invading soldiers and the printers scattered all over Europe, carrying knowledge of their art to other countries. William Caxton set up England's first printing press in 1477, and the first press in the new world was set up at Mexico City in 1540, with Harvard college establishing the first one in the English colonies in 1638.

In the 16th century men learned how to cast type instead of making it by hand, but the old method of

How the Teletypesetter Works

With this remarkable new invention, according to the men who have worked it out, one man may set the type in numerous printing offices in many cities. It works like the present automatic telegraph machines, except that it reproduces on a typesetting machine instead of on a typewriter. At the top is an operator at the master keyboard, which punches dots representing the characters on a tape, a sample strip of which is shown below. This perforated tape passes through a transmitting distributor which transmits the characters—over wires or radio—by means of electrical impulses. Beneath are shown the receiving perforator, the receiving printer (which makes a typewritten record for the editor) and the editing perforator, by which the editor can make desired changes. Upper left shows how the perforated tape is run through a machine that operates the linotype keyboard. The tape unwinds from the upper reel, passes through the machine and rewinds on the lower reel for filing.

hand-setting continued unchanged. Machines to cast type did not come into use until 1838.

Demands for increased speed made it obvious that the old method of setting type were far too slow, and many experiments were made with typesetting machines. A primitive, unsatisfactory machine was introduced in 1822, and an improvement was brought out in 1843; but it was not until 1835, when Ottmar Mergenthaler brought out the ancestor of the modern linotype, that a satisfactory machine was perfected.

ANNUAL SANTA CLAUS LETTERS APPEARING

Every day the Appleton postoffice receives a number of letters from Appleton children, addressed to Santa Claus. Some of the envelopes bear stamps and others do not. These letters, under postal regulations, unless they are claimed by some organized benevolent or welfare society, are sent to the dead letter office. According to F. F. Wettengel, acting postmaster, no such organization in Appleton has made a request for the letters, so they are held for a week and at the end of that time are sent to the dead letter office in Washington, D. C.

The Story of Christmas

Standing before him there in that bleak room, the ghost of Marley, old Scrooge's former partner, told the miserable Scrooge that he was to be visited by three spirits that night, and that if he valued his peace, he had better pay attention to the advice the wraiths gave him. Then Marley vanished as he had come, with a great clanking of chains.

By NEA. Through Special Permission of the Publishers of The Book of Knowledge, Copyright, 1923-25.

After the ghost had disappeared, Scrooge grew braver, and denounced the whole thing as "humbug." He lay down and was soon asleep.

It was still dark when he awoke and peered anxiously into the gloom. A strange hand drew aside the curtains of Scrooge's bed.

Before Scrooge's amazed eyes stood the figure of a child, with long white hair, in a dress trimmed with summer flowers. From the crown of its head seemed to spring a bright, clear jet of light. The figure spoke: "I am the Ghost of Christmas Past." Before Scrooge knew it, the spirit had led him back many weary years to his happy boyhood home. (To Be Continued)

25 FAMILIES ON LIST FOR YULE CHEER

Clubs and Citizens Preparing to Contribute Toward Relief of Needy

New London—The names of about twenty-five families are found on a list prepared by Miss Loretta Rice, city nurse, in preparation for the Christmas season. Among these names are several who more than ordinarily deserving, their needs arising from pressure of circumstances and handicaps, and not from ordinary shiftlessness, Miss Rice declared.

People interested in circulating and sharing a bit of the real Christmas spirit, Miss Rice believes, could do better than to investigate the needs of these families, many of whom have children who will have little of the holiday happiness unless it is brought in from the outside.

Rotarians and Lions have not yet made definite plans relative to the season, but it is probable that they will this year, as in former years, distribute their baskets of holiday gifts.

The Civic Improvement League on Monday night voted $10 to be given into the care of Miss Rice, who will buy small gifts of warm stockings and mittens in homes where they are most needed. The league members will cooperate with the two service clubs, following their decision to act on a joint Christmas committee, and will contribute baked goods and canned fruit or whatever they care to give.

Milo Smith, city poor commissioner, stated that although there are always a number of names on the city's lists, the city is not at present overburdened with needy citizens. Work, he said, is plentiful and the cold not extreme. Thus conditions are better than usual.

MARTIN SPEAKS ON DEMOCRACY IN U. S.

Waupaca-co Judge Discusses Problem of Foreign Born in This Country

New London—At a joint meeting of Rotarians and Lions at the Elwood hotel on Monday, W. N. Martin, Waupaca-co judge, spoke upon the subject of alien born in this country and the problems arising from their presence here. "Is Democracy a Good Thing?" Judge Martin explained the conditions which exist in the European countries, whence come the great numbers to our cities. He stated that democracy will only be safe when these great numbers of men and women are educated to the true meaning of democracy and the principles of the country to which they have come. The farm and its freedom from city congestion should be an attraction to these people, he pointed out, but the city appeals to them, and the city is where crime has its beginning in most cases. The speaker cited cases where education is creating a different spirit among foreigners, one of these being in the schools conducted for foreign born by the Ford Motor works.

ISSUE RULES FOR SCHOOL DEBATORS

Scouting of Debate Representatives Is Prohibited by Conference

Milwaukee.—(P)—New rules for the state high school debating contest in February and March on the question of the direct primary in Wisconsin are being issued this week by Almore L. Scott, secretary of state high school forensics association, from headquarters at the university extension division. The revisions were adopted at the November meeting of the state forensics board at Milwaukee.

Saturday is set as the final date for entering the debating events, and the first round of debates in the nine districts must be run off by February 8, the second round by Feb. 15, semi-finals for the north, central and south sections of the state by March 1, and section finals by March 15. The state championship will be March 23.

Scouting of any debate representatives of a school which may later compete with the winner is prohibited. This rule was adopted on report of cases of scouting last spring and is based on the idea that debating is a game wherein knowledge of the subject is more important than the advance information on opponents' tactics.

Disagreements over proper judges for debates are to be settled hereafter by the district chairman. In "triangular" debates the judges are chosen by majority vote of the principals of the three schools participating, but in dual debates, less frequently held, possibilities of a deadlock are eliminated by the new provision.

It is ruled that no member of a school debating team may debate both sides of the same question against an opposing school.

Awards are a silver loving cup to the school winning the state championship, to be held permanently by a school winning it three times; banners to schools winning section championships, and gold and silver and bronze medals to team members and alternates in the state debate, according to the rank of the team.

School entries to date for the spring forensics events, including debating, oratory, and declamation contests, number 243 as against 150 at this time. Next year, it is said, Richmond won the state debating championship.

G. J. Balzer, Milwaukee, chairman, J. E. Rohr, Nekeosa, and G. A. Bassford, Ashland, were re-elected last week to the state forensics board by referendum vote of member schools in the Milwaukee, Stevens Point, and Superior districts respectively, it is announced.

VOLLEYBALL TOURNEY TO BE RESUMED JAN. 15

It was decided to start the second half of the Fox River Valley Volleyball tournament Jan. 15, at a meeting of representatives of teams from Green Bay, Fond du Lac, Oshkosh, Kaukauna, Neesham, Kimberly and Appleton at the Y. M. C. A. Monday evening. Plans for permitting the Columbus club of Green Bay and the Kaukauna Y. M. C. A. to enter the tournament were approved by the group.

The schedule and rules for the second half will be revised this week by A. P. Jensen, physical director in charge of the tournament. On Saturday evening, Jan. 15, the Oshkosh club will hold a volleyball doubles tournament. It is expected three or four Appleton teams will enter, according to Mr. Jensen.

TWO MEN FINED FOR HAVING PUNCHBOARDS

Russell Bergell and Elmer Kling, proprietors of a small grocery store at 84 N. Their store was raided by Police Chief George T. Prim and Sergeant Mathew McGinlin Tuesday afternoon and about 25 punchboards of various sizes were confiscated. Some of the boards had not yet been used and others were already in use. One of the boards offered a watch and another a cigar lighter as prizes. Several of the boards offered candy as prizes.

After Saturday the flight will be made by biplanes of the same type used until recently on the Milwaukee-St. Paul route. These planes were selected for this route because it is easy to land them and they are preferred for difficult flying, especially in the winter.

CAST TALKS ON YOUTH MOVEMENT IN GERMANY

Dr. G. C. Cast of Lawrence college addressed the high school faculty on the German Youth Movement at a meeting at the high school Tuesday afternoon.

Dr. Cast drew comparisons between German and American youth and explained the movement in Germany. He said that it had originated in the nineties as a revolt against the formalism and artificiality of the education and training of German youth, and that the purpose of it was to bring flexibility, humanity and vitality into the life of the younger people. At present, he said, the movement is receiving support in the home, the church, the school, and in politics.

Dr. Cast pointed out that the youth movement in America is unnecessary because there are already enough outlets for the development of personality and self-expression.

ASKS DIVORCE ON JEALOUSY CHARGE

Husband Accused Her of Being Too Friendly With Other Men, Wife Says

Charging her husband, William Wendt, 38, Seymour farmer, was jealous and that he accused her of being too friendly with other men and even criticized her because she rode in an automobile with a male friend in the daytime when he wasn't along. Mrs. Margaret Wendt, 31, route 4, Appleton, has started divorce proceedings in municipal court. The case opened Tuesday before Judge Theodore Berg and testimony was still being taken Wednesday morning. It is expected the case will not be finished before Wednesday afternoon.

More than 150 spectators, many of them from the vicinity in which the Wendts lived, packed the small municipal court room on the first floor of the courthouse that Judge Berg was forced to adjourn to the circuit court room to accommodate the crowd.

Mrs. Wendt testified that one night her husband kicked her out of bed and on another occasion he shoved her against the wall of the bedroom as she was preparing to go to bed.

The defendant told the judge he was willing to take his wife back if she didn't want to live with him any longer. Both of the parties are asking the custody of two minor children.

The Wendts were married on Dec. 23, 1914, at Seattle, Wash. Mrs. Wendt's former home. They separated on Oct. 25.

She sued the city for $25,000 damages and the case was decided in her favor in circuit court for Outagamie-co. The city appealed the case to the state supreme court which reversed the findings of the lower court. The appeal to the United States district court followed.

Excavating for the subway will be rushed as fast as possible, it is said, crews being kept on the job day and night so that a maximum of work may be done before zero weather halts operations. Filling out under the bridge is part of the move to extend S. Superior-st through to W. Lawrence-st.

STOCKS CONTINUE UPWARD MOVEMENT

Steels, Coppers and Motors Lead Advance During Early Trading

New York.—(P)—The recovery in stock prices, which has been under way since Monday, was resumed at the opening of Wednesday's market, with the steels, coppers and motors in the forefront of the advance. National Biscuit opened 3 points higher and Kansas City Southern, Canadian Pacific, Anaconda Copper, Gold Dust and Radio showed initial gains of a point or two.

Buying orders were distributed over a fairly broad list in the early trading. Bullish enthusiasm probably was created by the recent easing of call money rates and receding of higher dividends. Wall Street also is looking forward to more stock split-ups next year, thinking and speculating being the latest mention in this respect.

Public utility issues again attracted a large following. American Express ran up 5 points, Radio City and General Electric advanced 4 points. Ralls also moved up in expectation that the recent increase in car loadings would result in substantial higher earnings over the next few months. Union Pacific, Delaware and Hudson, Rock Island and Missouri-Kansas-Texas all sold a point or so higher.

A few soft spots in the early trading. Bethlehem and Ludlum Steels ran into some profit taking and closed lower. American Electric and Commercial Solvents also fell back a point or two. Foreign exchanges opened firm, with sterling unchanged at $4.85 3-16.
